HOOVER DEFIED ON RELIEF BILL

Today

That Strange Death. Capone Will Arrive. Another War? Unberuien! Wise, Super-Wise, Coolidge.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

MYSTERIOUS DEATH, carried by the fog and killing scores in Belgium, worries the British. Reassuring words, to the effect that it only injured those that were already ill, or very old, are not convincing.

In Yorkshire, near Grosmount, 10 cattle are found mysteriously dead in the fog, with symptoms that look much like those of the Belgian death fog, which also killed cattle.

COULD IT BE, one guess is as good as another, that the recent shower of meteorites brought with it, from distance space, some poisonous substance that, reduced to powder by contact with the atmosphere, floats about in the fog, and is carried into the lungs? Meteorites bring us iron, copper, gold. Why not arsenic, or a worse, unknown poison, from some vicious inter-stellar neighbor?

THE GREAT CAPONE, at whose name the average gangster turns pale, is to visit Chicago. There is power in such a man. The Chicago American's city editor should escort him to Chicago's art museum and have his photograph taken beside the equestrian statue of Colleoni, who was the Capone of his day.

And while Capone is in town the city fathers might ask him "what would you charge to make this town peaceful and make rockets only a memory?"

He might pacify Chicago as Mussolini pacified Sicily, when he killed the Mafia, and the Black Hand by the power of his will, and the terror of his name.

WASHINGTON THINKS there is a probability of war in Europe in the next three to five years.

It might come sooner. We learned in 1914 that the crack of a pistol and the foolishness of rulers can start a war as quickly as a match can start a fire.

There may be another pistol shot, or something like it.

BUSINESS ASKS: "What would be the effect on the United States?"

This country, we hope, would not send ten billion dollars to help along Europe's fighting, and would not ship three million men to join a fight that is not started by us.

The war would produce the usual temporary prosperity boom here, top prices for copper, wheat, a great demand for everything we produce.

Then, as war helps nobody on earth, we should, eventually, bear our share of the loss, as we are paying now, with our depression, for the last big war.

IN YESTERDAY'S Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, Calvin Coolidge published an excellent short sermon on advertising. Having good merchandise is not enough, said Mr. Coolidge, declaring:

"It is just as essential to create a desire for it. THAT IS ADVERTISING."

The article concludes:

"Goods not worth advertising are not worth selling."

"If your business isn't worth advertising, advertise it for sale."

STALIN, BOSS OF RUSSIA, had eight men, scientists, on trial for treason. They confessed.

Enormous crowds howled for the death penalty. Everybody said:

"Of course Russia will kill the eight as quickly as possible."

Now comes news that the death sentences are commuted to 10 years in prison, and the prison terms of three will be made shorter.

The cynic will says:

"The accused confessed exactly what Stalin wanted, hence the leniency."

It is a change in Russian methods since Peter the Great. For those that plotted against him, he built a platform on which they were tortured to death slowly. Those that plotted and were dead were dug up and their corpses dragged on sleds pulled by swine, beneath the execution platform that the blood of their confederates might drop on them.

IN FAR CALCUTTA three Bengali gunmen forced their way to Col. Simpson, head of the Bengal prison, shot and killed him, and wounded another officer. Two killed themselves, the third tried suicide but failed.

THOSE ARE primitive Hindu gunmen. Ours are more efficient. Some time ago Nicholas Lucciano, an "informer," called "Cheeks" because of his pink complexion, sent three murderers to the electric chair. He was one of their gang and his evidence saved him from death. At 5 o'clock yesterday morning gunmen murdered him, as he sat in a restaurant.

SENATOR WALSH, of Massachusetts, wants the government to establish a five-day week in government service, to help the employment situation.

Industrialists have learned that the eight-hour day is possible and beneficial. Year in and year out men will do more good work in eight hours a day than they would in 10 hours a day.

Perhaps it will be discovered that men can do more work in a five-day week life time than on the old plan.

Big business men know they can do better on a five-day week. You don't find them at their offices on Sa' days, you do find them on the golf links.

PRESIDENT ANGERED AT BOOST IN FUNDS

Larger Deficit Threatens, Executive Says; Fears Effect Upon Business

BULLETIN.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—INS.:—In the face of a presidential rebuke against excessive expenditure for relief of national depression, the Senate this afternoon ignored White House advise and enacted a $60,000,000 bill providing feed, seed, fertilizer and food loans to farmers in all drought stricken or storm ridden areas of the country.

The measure, as passed, carried an authorization $35,000,000 in excess of the President's recommendation. It was enacted under a fire of criticism directed at the President and his Secretary of Agriculture, Arthur M. Hyde, because of their opposition to loans to farmers for the purchase of food.

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—President Hoover gave Congress a stinging rebuke today for the manner in which it has received and dealt with his recommendations on the economic situation.

What he proposed to Congress in his messages, he said, represented the extreme limit to which Congress could go without making inevitable an increase in taxes, and, although the session is now only little more than a week old, enough proposals have been advanced to run total appropriations to above $4,500,000,000.

The presidential rebuke to Congress was contained in a prepared statement which he gave to newspaper correspondents at the regular Tuesday press conference. He was plainly concerned and aroused.

Some of the suggestions that have been advanced beyond what he proposed in his message, he said, were "ill advised," while others "are simply playing politics at the expense of human misery." He said:

"The American people will not be misled by such tactics."

WOULD INCREASE DEFICIT

If Congress appropriates anything like what the measures already introduced provide for, he pointed out, it will cause a treasury deficit much greater than that already envisioned, $180,000,000, and this can be met only by increased taxes or by a bond issue. Neither meet with his approval.

A tax increase, he declared, will fall on all classes and add to the present unfavorable economic situation, while a bond issue would simply take away from private industry that much working capital.

Ruth Nichols Aims At Trans-U. S. Mark

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 9.—(AP.)—In an attempt to smash both the men's and women's records for flying time in a West-to-East trans-continental flight, Ruth Nichols, Rye (N. Y.), aviatrix, took off for New York from United Airport, near here, today.

HELEN MORGAN DENIES TROTH

Helen Morgan, star of "Sweet Adeline," appearing at the Nixon, and famous piano-perching crooner in New York night clubs, today denied that she has even the slightest intention of marrying Arthur M. Loew, theater magnate.

The report gained currency after news came from Reno that Mildred Zukor Loew had been granted release from the ties that bound her to Arthur via the quick divorce route.

Miss Morgan admitted that she and Loew—and Mildred—are good friends, that she is friendly with Arthur, but says emphatically that she has no intention of marrying anyone—at least "for a coupla years."

Helen revealed that her mother had wired her about the reports of her probable marriage, and added that the whole story was "perfectly ridiculous."

PASTOR SLAIN ON DEER HUNT

CLEARFIELD, Pa., Dec. 9.—(INS.)—The Rev. D. G. Selker, 49, pastor of the Emmanuel Methodist Church of Clearfield, was killed almost instantly today when struck by the stray bullet of an unidentified deer hunter.

The accident occurred near Rush Township, in Center County, where the clergyman, with a party of friends, was beating through the woods for deer.

Hawks Cuts Time, Washington to N. Y.

CURTISS AIRPORT, VALLEY STREAM, N. Y., Dec. 9.—(INS.)—Capt. Frank M. Hawks set a new record in a flight from Washington to New York today, it was learned when the official time was given out as 58 minutes. This is five minutes under the record he set on October 21. His average speed was 228 miles an hour.

Reed-Borah Tilt Over Who Started War Stirs Senate

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—(INS.)—A sharp debate over national responsibility for provoking the World War startled the Senate this afternoon, with Senator David A. Reed (Rep.), of Pennsylvania, blaming Germany and Senator William E. Borah (Rep)., of Idaho, declaring France and Great Britain must share the responsibility.

Newspaper agitation for cancellation of America's share of German reparations brought on the debate, but it veered off into the question of German responsibility for the World War.

Reed and Borah, with other senators, united, though, in declaring against any cancellation either of German reparations or of Allied debts to the United States. Reed warned that if Germany's reparations were reduced then the Allied nations would begin anew their campaigns for cancellation of their debts to the United States.

A rather innocent move by Senator Copeland (Dem.), of New York, to publish in the Congressional Record a newspaper article telling of severe economic

Four Children, Hurt When Chum Was Killed, Face Accused, Cannot Testify

BULLETIN.

Attorney Louis Litle, defending Frank Kubiszewski and Frank Nowak, charged with killing a boy and injuring four others in a wild auto ride, said both men would plead guilty to involuntary manslaughter after the jury free Kubiszewski of first degree murder, as he said it must do.

Frank Nowak, of Niagara street, on trial with Frank Kubiskewski, for murder in the death of William Harris, of 324 Lawn street, one of a group of children run down by an automobile in Lawn street July 25, was ordered acquitted by Visiting Judge M. Ward Fleming in Criminal Court today.

Mrs. Nowak, wife of the accused man, fainted in the courtroom when the court directed the jury to return a verdict of acquittal for her husband at the conclusion of the commonwealth's case. She was revived in the first aid room.

The boys, all of whom were injured when the vehicle ran wild, were presented in court today. They are Dan Kelly, 3, of 24 Lawn street; Regis McKnight, 5, of 29 Lawn street; Pat Spelina, 4, of 46 Lawn street, and Robert Stock, 5, of 34 Lawn street.

CLEVELAND, Dec. 9.—(AP.)—Twenty persons, many of them unconscious, were rushed to Charity Hospital here today, suffering from ammonia fumes which escaped from a refrigerating plant in a downtown Cleveland store building. Many of the victims were women.

The gas escaped while repairmen were working on a pump in a refrigerating plant in the basement of the four-story building occupied by the Chandler & Rudd Co., wholesale grocers.

A man and four women employes were carried from the building and customers fled to the street, staggering from the effects of the gas.

POOR LEADERSHIP

SENATOR ROBINSON, of Arkansas, a professed Democrat, and President Hoover of the United States, a professed Republican, are planning together to put the League Court over in the face of the frequent protests of the American people.

But it is not an UNNATURAL alliance.

The fact that President Hoover was nominated and elected on the Republican ticket does not make him any less a Wilson Democrat than Senator Robinson.

MR. HOOVER always has been an internationalist of the true Wilsonian stamp. When he came back to America after spending 20 years abroad, he decided to be a Democrat—partly because Wilson was the same kind of internationalist that he was, and partly because the Democrats were in power, and the most promising political alliance was naturally with the party in power.

At that time Mr. Hoover wanted to get this country into the League of Nations, and he wants to get this country into the League's Court now.

Since those Hoover-Wilson days, Mr. Hoover has not changed his internationalist ideas one particle. But when the Republicans came into power, he promptly transferred his political allegiance to the Republican party.

It was a shrewd move, which resulted in Mr. Hoover's election to the presidency, and anybody who thinks Mr. Hoover is not a good politician has another think.

"The crowd" may be unable to think, as Mr. Hoover hinted in an article reprinted in the Yale News some months ago. It may only feel, "having no mind of its own," as Mr. Hoover put it.

But although the crowd "feels" no approval for Mr. Hoover's internationalism, it must "feel" in its blind way, a good deal of admiration for Mr. Hoover's political sagacity.

FOR SENATOR ROBINSON'S political sagacity, on the other hand, there can be no admiration whatever.

Senator Robinson is the worst possible leader the Democratic party could have, because he is unable to see that the country in the last election repudiated Mr. Hoover's international policies.

The people wanted the opposite of the Hoover policies.

They elected Democrats that opposed Hoover policies.

They defeated Republicans that supported Hoover policies.

An intelligent Democratic leader would read the writing on the wall. He would profit by the Hoover mistakes, and have the people return more Democrats at the next election.

But Senator Robinson takes the contrary course.

He proposes to commit the Democratic party to Hoover's support.

That will put on the Democrats the odium of supporting Hoover's discredited policies, and, incidentally, WILL LOSE THEM THE NEXT ELECTION.

It was Grant who said that no matter how foolish the Republican party might be, the Democrats could always be counted on to be more foolish.

The jackass is the Democratic party emblem. As long as the party follows the lead of Senator Robinson, NO EMBLEM COULD BE MORE APPROPRIATE.

SEEK BANK AIDE IN SHORTAGE

Wanted on a charge of embezzeling a large sum from the Citizens National Bank of Monessen, the arrest of John D. Mammas, 32, former assistant cashier and manager of the foreign department of the bank, will be sought when he docks with the S. S. Saturnia in Naples, Italy, today.

Assistant United States District Attorney James I. Marsh today took first steps leading to Mammas' detention when he asked Attorney General William Mitchell to seek co-operation of Italian authorities through the State Department. Mammas is wanted on an information filed before the United States commissioner by R. C. Colter, special agent for the Department of Justice, charging Mammas with embezzelment.

The alleged defalcations were discovered shortly after December 1, according to Colter, about the time Mammas disappeared. Immediate search for Mammas disclosed his sailing aboard the Saturnia.

Ohio Banker Held In $88,000 Shortage

WARREN, O., Dec. 9.—(AP.)—Announcement that an $88,000 shortage in the accounts of the First State Bank of Newton Falls has been discovered and that Reese B. Jones, president, has been placed in the county jail here, was made by officials of the bank today.

Cash to offset the shortage was immediately deposited by the directors so that the bank was able to continue business undamaged by the loss. No charge has been placed against Jones.

Mrs. Hoover Under Ban as Car Driver

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—(AP.)—If Mrs. Hoover drives an automobile in Washington she is liable to be arrested. Her permit expired in October and she hasn't renewed it.

Mrs. Hoover, it was explained at the White House, likes driving in the summertime, but as for Washington's icy streets in winter, that is different. So she allowed her permit to expire until next spring, when it will be renewed.

COURT SCANS LATEST PLEA

Ex-Coal Baron Stays at Home Day He's Ordered To Start Serving Time

By JOHN C. NEILSON, Staff Correspondent.

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Dec. 9.—The predicted occupancy of a cell in the Fayette County Jail by Josiah VanKirk Thompson, former coal baron, was again held up today. Ten o'clock, the hour set for Thompson's appearance in court to begin a sentence for contempt of court, found Thompson at his palatial Oak Hill home, and a conference of attorneys under way, with Judge J. W. Dawson, of Orphans Court.

Concluding the conference an hour and a quarter after it had begun, the only comment obtainable was that a decision had been reached and would be announced in court this afternoon.

At the conference were E. C. Higbee for Thompson; T. J. Prather, representing the Princess of Thurn and Taxis; H. S. Dumbald for the Messmore estate, and L. K. Porter, trustee of the Niccolls estate.

Failure to return money borrowed from the John Niccolls estate was the basis of the contempt charge against Thompson, who had been a trustee. The Princess of Thurn and Taxis is a daughter of Niccolls.

Thompson, speaking over the phone from his home, said:

"I have nothing to say."

Girls, Blame Alice! She Sank Corsets for Ships!

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—(AP.)—Others may boast of beating swords into ploughshares, but only Alice Roosevelt Longworth can lay claim to turning corsets into cruisers.

Mrs. Longworth

A story first told to acquaintances by J. Leonard Replogle, director of steel supply of the War Industries Board during the World War, only today was admitted as accurate by Mrs. Longworth to an inquisitive friend.

Ardent admirers of the "Princess Alice" quote it as apt illustration of her sometimes challenged power in both the masculine world of governmental edicts, and the feminine world of fashionable dress.

Replogle related that during the World War corset manufacturers came to him with an appeal for steel. Investigating, he said, he learned corset manufacturers had been making a $42,000,000 profit per annum, using 28,800 tons of steel, "enough to build two battleships."

Was this essential industry? He telephoned Alice Roosevelt. It was not, replied the "princess" of sylph-like figure. The corset men got no more steel.

Strikingly contemperaneous in fashion's annals was the arrival of the uncorseted figure, which flourished for a full decade during which matron and maid alike discarded steel stays, bobbed their hair and made it a "flapper era."

Only during the past two social seasons has the corset re-entered the fashionable scene to a marked degree—and the new one is far less of the cruiser type.

PINCHOT INDORSES GOODNOUGH FOR HOUSE SPEAKERSHIP

FIGHT OVER DAIX POST LIKELY

Governor-Elect Refuses to Comment on Charges in Clarion Power Case

International News Service.

HARRISBURG, Dec. 9.—Out of a rather prolonged conference with newly-elected and holdover members of the State Senate from all counties of the state except Allegheny and Philadelphia, Gov.-elect Gifford Pinchot today had emerged with an indorsement of the candidacy of C. Jay Goodnough, of Emporium, for Speaker of the House in the forthcoming session of the Legislature.

No word was forthcoming from the Governor-elect, however, on his attitude toward the movement to replace A. P. Dale, Jr., of Philadelphia, as president pro tempore of the State Senate.

GOODNOUGH INDORSED

Formal indorsement of Goodnough for the speakership was the only statement issued by Mr. Pinchot at the close of the discussions, which will be resumed late today.

Although the Governor-elect declined to discuss the subject, it was predicted freely here that upon the information received at the conference here will depend the Governor-elect's decision as to a fight for control of the State Senate.

The "tall forester" was smilingly silent to queries as to his choice for secretary of the commonwealth.

SILENT ON POWER

He also declined to comment on charges made against the Public Service Commission in the Clarion River power case yesterday in Washington, stating that he had not read the newspapers and did not care to discuss the matter until he had thoroughly acquainted himself with what had gone on.

Only state senators will be interviewed at the present series of conferences, the governor-elect intimated, though another round-table conference may be called in the near future for House members.

M'CLURE AT PARLEY

Senator John J. McClure, Delaware County leader, was one of the first of the legislators to appear for the conference with the Governor-elect, and it was expected that a score more of members of the upper house of the Legislature would arrive here today to talk things over.

Former U. S. Senator Joseph R. Grundy was also expected to come here today to confer with the incoming Governor. County Commissioner Charles McGovern, of Allegheny County, one of the Pinchot leaders in that county in both the primary and the election, was also here for the pre-legislative session get-together.

SOVIET CALM AT JEERS

By EDWARD L. DEUSS,
International News Service.

MOSCOW, Dec. 9.—Red Russia, surprised but satisfied at its own generosity, had ceased its clamor today for the lives of eight men convicted by a special tribunal of conspiring to sabotage its industries and upset the government with the aid of foreign intervention.

While the outside world was inclined to jeer at the commutation of death sentences imposed on five defendants to 10 years' imprisonment and reduction of the prison terms of the remaining three defendants to eight years, Soviet circles replied calmly that the government was not desirous of "taking lives wantonly."

The prisoners were jubilant when informed of the action of the Central Executive Committee, which ordered the commutations. They have sworn to devote their lives and creative efforts to the cause of Sovietism.

Reasons given by the committee for the commutation pointed out that the defendants had confessed all their guilt and thereby helped to reveal "interventionalist plans by the French and emigre enemies," and that the Soviet is not vengeful.

newspaper dispatches quoting the solicitor as saying the state board failed to apply the law while the Clarion River Power Company issued more than $6,000,000 in "watered" stock.

The Ainey letter cited instances of co-operation given the federal board by the state commission, despite the claim of the state chairman that the state body has no jurisdiction over security issues of public utilities.

VIGOROUS PROTEST

Ainey said:

"Under these circumstances the Pennsylvania commission protests most earnestly and emphatically against such unwarranted, misrepresentative and untruthful statements as those ascribed in Associated Press dispatches to Solicitor Russel in his remarks to the District of Columbia Supreme Court. It is inconceivable to the Pennsylvania commission, how in the light of facts easily ascertainable, a representative of an agency of the federal government should be guilty of such gross imposition upon the court and such an unwarranted attack upon an official agency of one of the soverign states.

"The Pennsylvania commission hereby registers its protest with the Federal Power Commission and submits that unless Solicitor Russell can substantiate his statements, he should be obliged to retract them and make open apology in court."

U. S. GIVEN AID

The letter further proclaimed the allegation of Russell that the state commission "has displayed a similar attitude of indifference toward oother electric power companies in Pennsylvania" is "negatived" by co-operation given both the Federal Power and Trade Commissions in the way of furnishing records of electric companies held by the State Commission to the federal bodies. The letter continued:

"It has been the policy of the Pennsylvania commission to give every assistance possible to the Federal Power Commission in the latter's work of determining the costs of the various projects licensed by the Federal Power Commission in the State of Pennsylvania."

Instances in which the State Commission co-operated with the commission by the furnishing of autditors to work with auditors of the federal board or public utility commissions of other states were cited as the Lake Wallenpaupack, Safe Harbor and Conowingo projects, in addition to the Clarion River job.

COSTS IN COURT

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—(Universal.)—A Federal Court was today called upon to decide whether the Power Trust has the right to saddle upon consumers a $144 bill for three-dollar neckties, while denying the government the right to ask any questions about it.

The Clarion River Power Company's suit against the Federal Power Commission was boiled down to this simple question, as the government's authority to supervise power company finances was put to its first test in District Supreme Court.

The company sought to enjoin the commission from taking preliminary steps to squeeze $6,388,000 of alleged "water" out of the $11,033,000 total the company claims to have invested in a hydro-electric plant in Pennsylvania.

NECKTIES INVOLVED

Solicitor Charles A. Russell, of the commission, started to list "insiders' fees" and other payments making up the $6,388,000. Justice Jesse C. Adkins interposed:

"Never mind the other items. The neckties are enough."

BISHOP CALLED IN LINDSEY CLASH

International News Service.

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—Bishop William T. Manning was under subpena call today for his appearance Friday on West Side Court in connection with the disorderly conduct charge against former Judge Ben B. Lindsey, of Denver, militant advocate of companionate marriage.

Announcement of the service late yesterday was made by Arthur Garfield Hays, counsel for Lindsey.

Lindsey, earlier in the day, was granted adjournment until Friday of hearing of the charge that resulted from his attempt Sunday in the Cathedral of St. John the Divine to answer Bishop Manning's attack against him and his theories of companionate marriage.

Hays also announced that he is considering bringing a personal suit against Bishop Manning in Lindsey's behalf. He said that if he does so he may ask Samuel Untermyer, noted lawyer, to join with him in Lindsey's behalf. Untermyer, while attacking Bishop Manning for the personal aspects of his address against Lindsey and his ideas, indicated that he would not take over the case.

BACKED BY ACTOR

Lindsey, before leaving for a speaking engagement in Reading, Pa., made public a telegram he had received from Owen Moore, actor, and J. Percival Gerson, physician to Mrs. Lindsey, in Los Angeles. The telegram said:

"We and the rest of your many admirers are solidly behind you in your righteous protest. It would be an indictment of intelligence in general and our time in particular if such stupendous effrontery under the guise of religion should be allowed to go unchallenged. We glory with you in the great contribution of yourself and Mrs. Lindsey toward human amelioration and betterment. Our belief, love and friendship are with you. A telegram has been sent to Mayor Walker."

Bishop Manning cancelled his appointment to rededicate St. Bartholomew's Protestant Episcopal Church today. The bishop will also be unable to attend a luncheon which is to follow in the community house, at which he was to have been the guest of honor and chief speaker.

TALK DRAWS CROWD

READING, Pa., Dec. 9.—(A.P.)—Before an audience that was transferred from the 300-seat auditorium of the Woman's Club to the 1,600-seat Orpheum Theater, former Judge Ben B. Lindsey attacked Bishop William B. Manning, who he declared was attempting to give his own clergy a black eye. He said:

"I have been made the goat by Bishop Manning. He has decided to attack me and make me black, so that even members of his own clergy are made black.

"I haven't ever said or written that I want marriage to end. Marriage has been with us thousands of years and I hope that it will be with us thousands of years more. I am happily married and have lovely children."

HOUSE SPEEDS JOBLESS AID MEASURE

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—Speeding the congressional program to expand federal public works to provide employment, the House Appropriations Committee today reported a bill carrying $110,000,000 for work on highways, rivers and harbors, flood control and forest and national parks, roads and trails.

The bill, a modification of President Hoover's $150,000,000 relief plan, was reported unanimously. Passage in the House within a few hours was forecast.

AMOUNT REDUCED

In slashing the presidential request to $110,000,000, Representative Wood (Rep.), of Indiana, chairman of the Appropriations Committee, announced that the $40,000,000 allotment would be considered in regular appropriation bills and approved if found to contain real employment relief.

The $40,000,000 balance was criticized by both Republicans and Democrats in committee on the ground it contained such proposals as purchase of army uniforms and rations.

Meanwhile, the revolt of Democrats against the harmony pledge of their leaders spread in the Senate today over the protests of administration spokesmen, who insisted Congress support the President in the present unemployment emergency.

WANT OWN PROGRAM

The demand of Senator Walsh (Dem.), of Massachusetts, that the Democrats propose a relief program of their own, met with considerable approval among his colleagues. Walsh declared the Democrats had become the majority party in the last election, that Mr. Hoover had abdicated his national leadership and that the Democrats should take the initiative in relieving agricultural and unemployment distress.

Senators Wagner (Dem.), of New York, and Trammell (Dem.), of Florida, indorsed Walsh's idea of a Democratic relief program. Wagner said:

"I favor a Democratic program. I already have one. I wouldn't want taxes to be increased but this is an emergency and we can't let men and women starve. If sufficient federal funds are required, that to vote them would necessitate an increase in taxes, I would not be deterred by that fact."

Steubenville Man Fined; Violated Ban

The goods were removed from Pittsburgh to Wierton, W. Va.

In Portland, Ore., where Miss Frederick is appearing in a stage production, she declined to comment on the filing of the suit. Her manager, however, was quoted as saying an answer would be filed in Los Angeles today.

The actress is 45 years old.

lapsed on the witness stand as he told how he had run into the street to stop the ice-wagon machine which was dragging a bleeding child on the runners.

Violet Welsh, 12, gave her testimony:

"I was sitting on the steps with a dozen little children when I saw the automobile jump over the curb, swerve and drag the little Harris boy away."

Kubiszewski, 35, came here 20 years ago from Poland. He has been naturalized. Nowak, 33, came from Czechoslovakia 17 years ago but has never become a citizen.

A jury of three women and nine men were picked late yesterday after Attorney Louis Little had questioned each as to whether he was prejudiced against Negroes and foreigners. Assistant District Attorney John F. Haggerty made no objections to these questions, nor did Visiting Judge W. Ward Fleming, of Center County, before whom the case is being tried.

CAR FAILS TO STOP

Sidney Taxay, 53 Lawn street told how he had run after the automobile crying to Kubiszewski the driver, that an injured child was being carried on the bumper. Finally he jumped to the running board, struck the driver with his fist, and steered the car into a vacant lot, stopping it by hitting a fence. He said the driver's answers to his questions was:

"Me no understand English."

Anna White, 15, of Chicago visiting relatives in Lawn street, said she saw the death car coming-zagging down the street and run onto the pavement, striking down the Harris boy and other children. Her little cousin, John McKnight, suffered a broken arm.

WOMAN CURSED

Mrs. Sarah E. Palmer said she was sitting on her porch in Lawn street and saw the car pass with the injured child on the bumper.

"I cried out 'For God's sake stop,'" she said, "and the driver or passenger shouted back 'Go to h——!'"

While this murder trial is attracting a large crowd of Lawn street relatives of the dead and injured children, another murder case is going on in the courtroom of Visiting Judge O. C. Kent, of Crawford County.

TELL OF QUARREL

Defeated Congress Dry May Get Post

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—(INS.)—Representative Louis C. Cramton (Rep.), of Michigan, who for 16 years has been one of the more zealous dry leaders in the House, may be given a federal berth after his retirement from Congress on March 4, next, it was reported today.

Cramton was defeated in the Michigan primary last summer by an anti-dry and is now what is known in Washington as "a lame duck."

It was reported today that Cramton is being considered for appointment as assistant comptroller general, which carries a salary of $8,500 a year.

conditions in Germany, projected the debate. It brought Reed to his feet with a defense of the reparations agreement.

Reed declared German reparations amounted to but $480,000,000 a year, while interest charges on war debts in the United States alone amounted to $600,000,000 a year. He added that Great Britain was paying the stupendous sum of $2,000,000,000 a year in interest on war debt. He added:

"We should bear these figures in mind, that, while Germany complains over reparations amounting to $480,000,000 a year, her victorious adversary, Great Britain, foes on under the staggering payment of interest four times that of Germany.

"We put things in a false proportion if we sympathize too much over making Germany pay the comparatively small amount she brought on herself by her responsibility for the calamity of a war that almost wiped civilization from the face of the earth."

Borah immediately replied, agreeing with Reed in protesting against candelation of reparations or debts, but protesting against his indiotment of Germany for causing the war. He said:

"I quite agree that we have canceled too many and too much of our war debts. We settled with Italy for 28 cents on the dollar and with France for 48 cents on the dollar. France was very prosperous then and has been prosperous ever since.

"I do not agree about the senator's views toward Germany. Germany was in a different position from any of our allies at the end of the war. She was stripped of all her resources and put into a difficult position to pay reparations or debts.

"I also agree that Germany was the sole cause of the war. I don't agree with that at all. France and Great Britain and all the other European nations which were engaged in that military system which has existed there from the Moroccan affair down to 1914, must share in the responsibility for the great war."

Methanol Used in Auto Fatal as Beverage

The motorist may use methanol in the radiator of his automobile with safety, but woe to the man who tries it as a beverage, according to a report by the Pittsburgh Bureau of Mines.

Methanol is an artificial wood alcohol which has come into active use recently as an anti-freeze. Bureau of Mines officials recommend that manufacturers of methanol add bright coloring matter to warn customers that the liquid is not to be shaken into cocktails.

The contents of two or three ordinary whisky glasses taken into the stomach may cause blindness and death. Chemists say that no amount of treatment or refining makes it less poisonous for internal use.

Several cases of poisoning have been reported from Western Pennsylvania. Ten cases were noted in Philadelphia over Thanksgiving. All resulted from drinking the radiator fluid.

STEPMOTHER CONVICTED IN GIRL'S MURDER

RESCUES HIM ON LIQUOR CHARGE

Screen Star a Sensation In Norristown When She Rushes to Parent's Aid

International News Service.

NORRISTOWN, Pa., Dec. 9.—Harry J. Boyland, Wilmington (Del.) motorist, seized here on rum charges, was free in bail today, but it took a hurried trip across the continent and a $2,000 check on a Hollywood bank by his foster-daughter, Estelle Taylor, screen star and wife of Jack Dempsey, to secure his release.

Boylan's automobile skidded and overturned here yesterday. An investigation, police claimed, revealed a quart of liquor in the car. Boylan was immediately arraigned on charges of possession and transportation of liquor and he placed a hurry call for his celebrated daughter, who had rushed to the bedside of her ill grandfather, C. C. Barrett, 78, at Wilmington.

Not long after, Estelle gave the citizens of Norristown an unaccustomed treat. Her arrival was heralded by a private motor of costly make and a chauffeur in full regalia. Comfortably seated in the rear, she nodded pleasantly to hundreds of persons who jammed about the court to see her.

Inside Magistrate McLoughlin tugged gently at his lapel and smiled his most fetching smile as Estelle entered. It was just a matter of $2,000, he assured her, and Papa Boylan would be walking the street again. His release on bail would cost her $1,000 while an additional $1,000 would release his car from the pound.

Without further parley, Estelle pulled a checkbook from her handbag and wrote in the required amount. The check was on a Hollywood bank. While waiting for her step-dad, Estelle revealed that she had rushed east to be at the bedside of her grandfather, who is critically ill.

FACES LIFE FOR DENVER KILLING

Mrs. O'Loughlin Laughs in Court Before Verdict; Detective Mate Flinches

DENVER, Col., Dec. 9.—(AP.)—Convicted of murdering her 10-year-old stepdaughter, Mrs. Pearl O'Loughlin today faced life imprisonment at hard labor in the Colorado state penitentiary.

The jury which heard the case of the titian-haired, 31-year-old stepmother, deliberated an hour and 35 minutes last night.

With Mrs. O'Loughlin's alleged confession to police barred as evidence, the verdict carried with it an automatic penalty. Under Colorado law, capital punishment can be imposed only where there is an eye-witness to the crime or a confession by the accused.

LAUGHS, JOKES

Laughing and joking with her attorney a moment before the jury filed into the box, Mrs. O'Loughlin listened intently but with no display of emotion as Judge Henry A. Calvert read the verdict.

The defense was granted 30 days in which to file a motion for a new trial. Should the motion be denied, John M. Keating, her counsel, said he will appeal to the State Supreme Court.

The formalities over, Mrs. O'Loughlin stood erect and walked with firm step from her chair down a narrow passageway to the prisoners' dock.

In the front row of the spectators' section sat the woman's husband, Leo, a city detective, whose life the state alleged she also sought. The husband flinched as the verdict was read.

CHILD STRUCK

In the closing argument, Earl Wettengel, district attorney, and Ralph J. Cummings, the prosecutors, endeavored to show that Mrs. O'Loughlin could not account for her movements the night of October 14, when her stepdaughter, Leona, was apparently hit on the head with a tire iron and her body thrown into the icy waters of Berkeley Lake.

The opportunity for the crime, Wettengel argued, rested between Mrs. O'Loughlin, her husband and his brother, Frank, who also is charged with the murder, his trial set for December 16. The husband was at work on a robbery investigation.

ESTATE MOTIVE

As a motive for murder, the state sought to show Mrs. O'Loughlin attempted to kill her husband's 73-year-old father, Dennis, by putting glass in a sugar bowl at his home in Fort Collins; to end the lives of her husband and step-daughter by placing glass particles in their food, and then to inherit the elder man's estate of approximately $35,000 and $3,200 in insurance carried by her husband.

ETHEL CLOSES SHOW IN N.Y.

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—(AP.)—Ethel Barrymore's Broadway engagement in "Scarlet Sister Mary" will be terminated Saturday night after a run of less than three weeks.

Explaining the failure of the Negro drama in which she stars and her daughter, Ethel Barrymore Colt, made her debut, she said:

"My friends in New York are determined not to come to see me in blackface.

"That is all right, but I believe in this play and I'm going to take it to some cities on tour which have expressed a desire to see me in it."

The play will go to Boston Christmas week. It is a dramatization of Julia Peterkin's Pulitzer prize novel of 1929 about the Gullah Negroes. It opened in Columbus, O., on September 25, and played in Pittsburgh and other cities before opening in New York.

FASCISTS RIOT OVER WAR FILM

BERLIN, Dec. 9.—(AP.)—Young Germany voiced its distaste for the American-made movie, "All Quiet on the Western Front," in a riotous demonstration in fashionable sections of Berlin last night. Twenty-seven arrests were made.

Drawn by reports that Paul Goebbels, Fascist member of the Reichstag, would stage another protest at showing of the film, thousands filled the movie house and massed about the outside.

Goebbels, who used white mice and stench bombs Friday night to bring temporary suspension of the film, addressed the crowd in a nearby plaza and started the thousands of Fascist youths on a march down Kurfuerstendamm, smart shopping boulevard.

Mounted police attempted to disperse the marchers. Police and opposing factions clashed on side streets, but none was injured. The main body of marchers finally was routed. The principal effect of the demonstration seemed to be to crowd the theaters where the film was being shown.

Forty-seven carloads of Christmas trees have arrived in Pittsburgh to provide the season's cheer in thousands of homes. Of the total, 17 cars came in this morning—and more are expected.

All but two of the cars are at the Pennsylvania Railroad produce yards at Sixteenth street. The others are at the Duquesne Freight station. Trucks are hauling out many trees to retail dealers.

The trees are spruce, balsam and Washington pine. One giant spruce has been selected as the city Christmas tree and will be erected at the entrance of the City-County Building.

The trees are shipped here largely from points in Vermont and Quebec. There are usually about 600 bundles to the car with as many as five trees to the bundle. Seven cars of holly and four cars of laurel have also come in from the north woods.

Coolidge Sees Benefits In Fixed Office Tenure

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., Dec. 9.

To the Editor of The Sun-Telegraph:

By observing developments in Europe we can see certain advantages of stability and security which we enjoy from a fixed tenure of office. The French premier has been forced from office after serving a few months. The British premier has an uncertain tenure and the German chancellor has just escaped defeat. In these countries the continuation of a party in power may rest on what kind of a speech someone can make in a parliamentary body at 2 o'clock in the morning. That explains some of the European dictatorships. It became impossible to live under so much uncertainty of constant elections and shifting policies. No one could plan for the future. Even in England at this minute some are advocating a form of dictatorship.

Calvin Coolidge

We often have governors, and occasionally a president, without a legislative majority of their party. But even that is better for us than constant uncertainty and perpetual turmoil of elections. We know fairly well what to expect from government for the next two years. Our system may not be so responsive but it is safe. If we do not get what we want we probably get more of what we ought to have.

CALVIN COOLIDGE.

FRENCH CABINET HOPES DIM

PARIS, Dec. 9.—(INS.)—Speed in the formation of a ministry urged by President Doumergue today brought forth redoubled efforts on the part of Senator Pierre Laval to achieve what another already had failed to accomplish.

Although official circles were inclined to view his task as hopeless, it was generally conceded that his chances of success were better than those of Senator Louis Barthou, who gave up his attempt after a day's struggle with the various political groups.

The large obstacle still in M. Laval's path is the same that ended the cabinet hopes of Senator Barthou. The radical party firmly declines to participate in a government wherein Louis Marin's Nationalists (The Right Group) holds a seat. The latter advocate religious teaching in public school.

Time Presses Doll Lady, Girls Urged to Hasten

Dear Little Girls:

Do you know that it is only 16 days until Christmas? Do you realize what a big job I have on my hands to take care o' every little girl in Pittsburgh and vicinity with my wonder "Tickletoes" dollies before the holidays? Fortunately, I have plenty of "Tickletoes" and each and every one of them is just the darling you want for a playmate.

GIRLS MUST HURRY

But, if you do want one for Christmas, you must hurry. The time is short. It takes a day or two for you to comply with my request and then it takes a day or two for me to examine your work. So, you see, everything can't be done in a minute. There is, however, still lots of time for you to get a "Tickletoes," but the sooner you go after "Tickletoes," the sooner you'll get her.

I still have an adorable "Tickletoes" for every little girl in Pittsburgh and vicinity who wants one. In return I am not asking little girls to do much for me, and what I am asking them to do is not hard to do.

Here are names of some of the little girls who have written to me during the last few days:

LETTERS RECEIVED

Every one of these little girls have, by this time, received a letter from me telling them just what they'll have to do to get my wonderful "Tickletoes." I want to impress upon all of you that "Tickletoes" is not just an ordinary doll. She's big, beautiful and unbreakable. She opens and shuts her sparkling eyes, she has three different voices, can play with her toes and clasp her hands, has rubber arms and rubber legs that bend just like the arms and legs of a real live baby, and she is prettily dressed in organdy with stockings and slippers to match.

Now, if you want a "Tickletoes," don't wait. Send in the coupon today and by return mail I'll tell you how you can have her before Christmas. Goodbye 'till tomorrow.

BANDITRY HERE SPURS HUNT FOR THUGS

Clark Asks 626 Additional Policemen for Outlying Sections; 2 Men Beaten

A reign of banditry in the Pittsburgh district last night and early today gave police the busiest period they have had in weeks. Two insurance collectors were beaten and robbed by the same men, police believed; two boys held up and robbed a motorist and numerous other crimes appeared on police blotters.

With the increase in the crime wave, Director of Public Safety James M. Clark today was prepared to ask Mayor Kline and Council for an additional 626 policemen, who would be added to the present force of about 1,600. The new men would be scattered through outlying sections now under-policed, the director said.

ROBBERS BEAT VICTIMS

William Ward, 30, of 1 Ambridge avenue, Fair Oaks, an insurance collector, while driving his car in Bellevue early today, picked up a hitch-hiker who asked to be taken to Millvale. When Ward reached a point in East Ohio street, Millvale, one square past the city-borough line, two men halted his car. They beat him and robbed him of $130.

He was picked up by two men and taken to the Millvale police station and then to the Allegheny General Hospital where it was said he had suffered severe lacerations of the skull.

Israel Gold, 42, an insurance agent, of 5729 Darlington road, was believed suffering from a probable skull fracture inflicted by two thugs who robbed him of $200 of the insurance company's funds, according to police. He is in Presbyterian Hospital.

Gold was walking in Taylor avenue near Wolfrum street, when the bandits attacked him with blackjacks. After beating him into unconsciousness, they took a wallet containing the money from his pocket. Gold was found a short time later by a pedestrian and taken to the hospital by police.

BOYS ROB AUTOIST

Two boys, neither more than 15, and armed with revolvers, stopped Frank Fleisher, of the Fairfax Apartment Hotel, Fifth avenue, at Ellsworth avenue and Neville street and forced him from his automobile. After taking $96 from his pockets, they drove off with the car.

An armed thug walked into the Heck & George haberdashery at 3945 Forbes street, and held L. J. George, one of the proprietors, at bay while he looted the cash register of $50 last night. The store is but a block from the Oakland Police Station.

A young man, armed with a revolver, entered the grocery of F. A. Scott, at 6207 Station street, last night, and robbed the cash register of $10, after forcing Miss Edith Hare, a clerk, into the rear of the store.

Sam Chaban, owner of a store at Beacon street and Murray avenue, reported to Squirrel Hill police late yesterday that his store had been entered the night before and robbed of $25.

James Cush, of 515 Fifty-second street, was robbed of $25 by two armed highwaymen who confronted him near his home early today. Cush told police.

B. H. Wood, of 5318 Camelia street, reported to police that a homeless man whom he had befriended stole $96 in cash and a watch valued at $50 from his home.

PLAN OFFICER'S BURIAL HERE

Lieut. Espy

Lieut. Howard Espy, 26, a U. S. Cavalry officer, of 203 McKinley avenue, who died Nov. 30 in Manila from injuries sustained in an automobile accident there, will be brought to Pittsburgh for burial. It was made known today by his sister, Miss Lillian Espy, of the McKinley avenue address.

The lieutenant was born in the South side. He attended South Side High school and later Penn State College, leaving the latter school when he received an appointment to the United States Military Academy at West Point. At the outbreak of the war he left West Point and secured a commission in the Army. He has been in the service since that time.

He was a football and basketball player of note, having played on the varsity teams at high school and at Penn State. Besides Lillian, he leaves three other sisters, Miss Stella Espy, Mrs. Edna Schlachter and Mrs. Caroline Buehner.

Alice, Dolly Sign Armistice; Lindsey Bout Off

By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER

going to tell you where Judge Crater is.

Dolly and Alice are talking again. Meaning Mrs. Gann and Mrs. Nick Longworth.

That's tough. Just when we were hoping the winter would challenge Judge Ben Lindsey.

Alice said, "Hello." Dolly said, "Hello." Which conversation proves there is no diplomat like a telephone central.

There is more than one way to kill a cat. Some people like to do it by throwing old shoes at the back fence.

But the Communists have a different sort of parliamentary procedure. When they leave the legation at the car barn they proceed to the embassy at the lunch wagon.

Then they organize a parade that cannot be stopped by red and green lights in a drugstore window.

The result is the eggs are soon slapped into an omelet.

How can we stop these outdoor exhibitions on the Capitol steps?

By treaties? Force? Authority? By speaking gently?

Call out the Army? Plus the Navy?

Much simpler than that.

Just soap the steps.

Congress had started its first session when the orated members heard the riot outside.

Naturally, they thought it was Borah starting the third session.

Or a senator from Pennsylvania arriving with an expert accountant hammering away at his expense account.

But it was the Communists demanding the best parking space in the country.

That is a matter that must be referred to a higher court. We'd like that ourselves.

In fact, we would like a law compelling the city to move the fire plugs 10 feet away from our car.

Then we would arrive at Utopia, which is a great place if the handgrips and indigo hold out.

50 Famous "Bengal" Rugs and American Orientals

Up to $175 Grades 98.50 All Size 9x12

You've read of "Bengal" rugs since you were a young lady, if you have read Scribner's and Vogue and the like. You've been led to believe they are fabulously beautiful—that their patterns are shadowy, blurry in the manner of exquisite tapestries; that their colorings are indescribably soft and lovely; and that their wear is as yet unfathomed (none having worn out). All of this is true. And ONLY because of our fortunate buying relations with the mills, is such an audaciously low price possible. The American Oriental rugs, with lustrous, washed finish, are fit companions to the "Bengals"—and are equally special in price. Just 50 rugs.

When's Now, Who's Who? That Is the Question In 'Berkeley Square'

By GEORGE SEIBEL

ALBERT EINSTEIN ought to draw royalty from every performance of "Berkeley Square," for it looks as if John L. Balderston had dramatized the Einstein theory in the play presented at the Alvin Theater last night.

George Seibel

You are kept guessing whether the time of the play is 1784 or 1928. One thing you are sure of—it begins on October 22.

The explanation is given in the words of Maeterlinck, who has declared "it is almost certain that there is nothing except an immense Present, eternal and unchangeable, where everything which has taken place or which will take place is continually taking place, and where tomorrow, except to the ephemeral spirit of man, can not be distinguished from yesterday or today."

Put that way you can understand it, though you know it isn't true, even though Monsieur Maeterlinck says it is "almost certain."

For the appreciation of Balderston's play, suppose you admit it's true. Then you will see how Peter Standish, who lives both in 1784 and 1928, can dazzle some of the friends of Johnson and Joshua Reynolds "with some cheap epigrams made up by a fellow named Oscar Wilde," and floor them with quotations from Lincoln and Woodrow Wilson.

You will also understand why Kate is reluctant to marry the dazzling Peter Standish. "A woman may well mistake to live with a man," says her brother, "who knows what she's going to do the day after tomorrow."

Mark Twain has played with the idea in his "Connecticut Yankee." H. G. Wells in "The Time Machine," dream plays and reincarnation plays have come close to it—but "Berkeley Square" turns it into a poetic idyl.

Think of finding idyllic poetry in the Einstein theory!

NO TIME OR SPACE

It all takes place in the morning room of a Queen Anne house in Berkeley Square, London, where the family in 1784 is awaiting the arrival of an American cousin, whose great riches make him a good catch for Kate, one of the daughters.

He arrives—in a driving rain—but he's quite dry. No wonder, for he has come from 1928.

He is supposed and expected to marry Kate, but the younger Helen falls in love with him and he with her. Alas, he cannot go off and marry Helen because he didn't do it. Things can't happen that didn't happen.

It's fatalism working the reverse lever. Not Yesterday, but Tomorrow this day's maidens did prepare.

Balderston almost makes us believe it, just as he almost made us believe in vampires in "Dracula."

The very capable company, with Leslie Howard playing Peter Standish, helps Balderston in making his case plausible. Howard bears himself with the debonair grace of a man who has stepped out of a canvas by Reynolds.

So too Margalo Gillmore, who is the heroine with a wistful air of resignation that justifies Peter's declaration: "I love you only, now, and in my own time, and in whatever other times may come."

IT'S SLEIGHT OF MIND

Juggling the years by delicate sleight-of-mind, Dramatist Balderston shows that even metaphysics and mathematics can be dramatized. And he makes us feel sorry even for the people who don't require any sympathy, if his theory be true—for why sympathize with people that haven't been born yet for a thousand years?

Of course there will be materialistic people, taking refuge in psychiatry, who will tell us that it is all a delusion on the part of Peter Standish of 1928, who has steeped himself in the life of 1784 until he lives it in his fever dream.

But let us take Einstein's word for the unity of time and space and believe in Netzsche's "ewige Wiederkehr"—and there hasn't been a more touching romance of the mystic sort since Du Maurier's "Peter Ibbetson."

LESLIE HOWARD DOES IT

For this illusion the main credit is due to Leslie Howard, but much to Sir Edwin Lutyens, who designed the interior set, and much to the mellow lighting that conveys a mysterious sense of the past.

The beauty and dignity of Dorothy Blackburn, who acts Georgiana, Duchess of Devonshire, and the snuffy old-world air of Tarver Penna as Mr. Throstle also stand out in the cast—most of which was not distinguished for any sense of the past.

Even though some of them remind you of Forty-second street rather than Berkeley Square, they cannot chill the poetic warmth of the drama. Is it fairy tale or nightmare? You should agree with Helen, that "fairy stories are beautiful and nightmares are ugly." And Alfred Einstein will furnish the scientific props for your faith.

SKY IS HIT IN LATEST SHARP PRODUCTION IN THE PITT

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

"Jerry," programmed as a comedy in three acts, is the new George Sharp production in the Pitt. It is one of those plays in which the players are handicapped by the playwright from the start. The lines aren't very brilliant. The situations aren't very diverting.

Pauline MacLean has the title role. She's a little girl who goes after and gets a man who has been engaged to marry her aunt for the last 20 years.

Paul McGrath is the man. And there ought to be Congressional medals or something for characters such as he. Surely anyone who succeeds in postponing marriage month by month for two decades deserves an award.

SHADES OF CHARLEY!

Mabel Kroman is the aunt. She displays some new gowns and is happy in the attempt to be unhappy when her engagement is broken.

Robert Fiske is a Pittsburgh-made Englishman. He's a sort of "double" for Eugene O'Neill's Dear Old Charley. His chief job is waiting around 20 years so he can play beau to Auntie for two acts.

Alice Ann Baker is the mother of Jerry. "Why was I burdened with such a child?" she laments. Well, ask us another.

SHE HITS THE SKY!

The action is laid in library and boudoir. The first act is a toy automobile effect, crumpled orchids and broken engagement. The second is great big gush of sunlight breaking into the room with the raising of one little window shade and then, after this dawn, a lull. And the third is a prolonged view of pale blue pajamas and a lot of reconciliations.

What we enjoyed most last night was the pill-throwing feat. Miss MacLean tosed poison tablets out the boudoir window and with a plop they struck Mr. Sharp's blue sky, two feet away in the distance.

Guild

Linda Watkins is featured with Frederick Perry and Glenn Anders in a new Theater Guild play, "In the Meantime," coming to the Nixon next week.

ACADEMY BURLESQUE IS 'SUGAR BABIES'

"Sugar Babies" featuring Harry (Hello Jake) Fields, as chief of comic, is the attraction in the Academy. Chuck Callahan assists in the fun skits, and Flossie DeVere, dancer, and Patricia Kelly, are prominent feminine members of the cast. Heading the variety acts are Gary and Evans, singers and dancers. Among other principals of a large cast are Rags Ragland, Charles Hendricks, Lew LeRoy, Fay Tunis and Babe Allott.

Luther League to Elect at Bellevue

The Luther League of Emanuel's Lutheran Church, Bellevue, will hold their annual election of officers at a meeting tomorrow night in the church rooms.

'Sweet Adeline,' in Nixon, Brings Gay Nineties And Much Fun

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

"Sweet Adeline," presented on the stage of the Nixon last night to the great satisfaction of a large audience, brought back the gay nineties, beer (on the stage), Helen Morgan, whom we have not seen in person since "Show Boat;" Irene Franklin, last amusing us here on the stage of the Davis; Charles Butterworth, unconscious only from the feet up, and James Thornton, grand old man of the genuine atmosphere that "Sweet Adeline" successfully recreates. Old days and old friends are here again!

This musical romance, for such it is labeled, is a worthy representative of the house of Hammerstein, which has given us such lavish productions as "Rose Marie" and "Golden Dawn." Oscar Hammerstein II wrote it, and Arthur Hammerstein produced it. Possibly to forestall any suspicion that the Hammerstein family was being neglected, Reginald Hammerstein was called in to stage the book. Jerome Kern composed the music, aided, in the theme song at least, by some smart old German who was pretty good at tunes, too.

FROM BEER TO STAGE

Now that the important credits of production are out of the way, let us inform you forthrightly of what we have intimated—it is a grand show. It is all about a girl who is a waitress in her father's beer garden in the first act, who becomes a great actress in the second and is the affianced of a true-hearted song-writer at the finale. Only she has loved and one who has loved her are strewn along the pathway of fate.

Helen Morgan is the lass from the good old Hoboken beer garden, in love with a local hero, who is in love with her sister until Helen becomes famous. She sings tearfully, and the effect is an emotional reaction in the same direction on the part of the audience. We wouldn't be so flippant as to term Miss Morgan a tear-jerker, but we are certain she would be most effective in "East Lynne," and we say that in the way of praise, not kidding. It's grand the way she does it—and does the audience like it! Especially the aforesaid theme song—"'Twas Not So Long Ago."

MISS FRANKLIN POPULAR

Irene Franklin had her big moments with the home folks, too, and she gave a fine burlesque of a burlesque queen. You must hear her revival of the Charles K. Harris school of lyrical endeavor in something containing the lines "'Twas a clubman they say made a bum out of May."

Mr. Butterworth is the funniest of those who essay dumbell types. Who else could get a laugh from a statement—"I like it" after reciting that he was going to write a skit involving a man who bound 50 pigeons when he took off his hat? A scene with Jim Thornton and Butterworth discussing time, etc., is most humorous. Mr. Thornton's principal appearance is in a scene contrasting song writers, past and present.

Beatrice Kay, comedienne, gives the play its touch of vivacity, and pleases the patrons in a comedy duet with Butterworth, "Spring Is Here."

The first act finale is a novelty, representing the rehearsal of a burlesque production, with various players down in the orchestra pit and in the aisles. Helen Morgan seated on the piano—also unusual—trying to sing as specialists and other specialists perform on the stage.

Trains Safest Place In Expert's Opinion

CHICAGO, Dec. 8.—(AP.)—A railway train, in the opinion of Charles E. Hill, general safety agent of the New York Central Railroad, is the safest place a person can be in the United States.

Speaking before the safety section of the American Railway Association, Hill said the number of deaths to passengers had decreased from 250 in 1913 to 114 in 1929, and that 78 of last year's fatalities were from causes over which the roads had no control.

Don Lanning of the musicals-de-dahs and the bride have exploded because of her front page stuff in the midwest . . . The Leo Fitzgeralds (Gertrude Scott) who were plotting to let a judge decide it, probably won't—if the Cupiding via the phone works . . . Earl Carroll and his stiff-shirted "friends" were so embarrassed at the Casino the other night when Jimmy Savo, of "Vanities," forgot that he wasn't on the Nude Amsterdam stage, and removed all his clothes.

Kathryn Crawford, of "The New Yorkers" troupe, is causing plenty of headaches among the Head Men who are putting the show on . . . Chas. Cullen, who played Capt. Stanhope in "Journey's End," and Malina Gaines, a non-pro, will be sealed at City Hall Thursday.

Helen Maxwell, who is sealed to J. O. Hanley ("The 20 Million $ Kid") is at the Harbor Sanitarium plenty ailing . . . Kathryn McCarthy, who didn't want Helen to be lonesome, went to the same hosp. and had her tonsils tonsed . . . There were 22 dark theaters on Broadway last wk, but there were also eight smash hits. . . . Proving what? . . . That any year it is a good year for a good show . . . Tony Biddle will sponsor Leo Bezos at the Palm Beach Embassy . . . "The Green Pastures" has been the theme of more than 40 church sermons in the Metropolitan Belt . . . Although a hotel ad lists Anna May Wong as coming from China, she was born in Calif.

The WESTINGHOUSE REFRIGERATOR . .

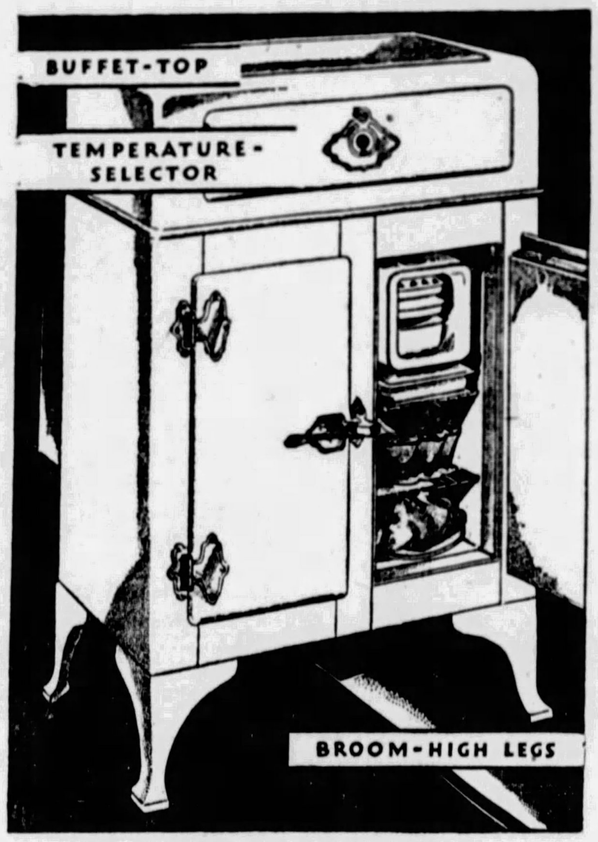
ONE CHRISTMAS GIFT THAT PAYS FOR ITSELF

Even if you don't ordinarily like to give "practical" Christmas gifts, you can add a Westinghouse Refrigerator to your list without disturbing other plans, since it is one Christmas gift that actually pays for itself.

The reason for this is a very simple one. Food experts agree that hand-to-mouth buying, food spoilage, and waste of leftovers conspire to add 20 per cent to the annual housekeeping bills of the average home. A Westinghouse Refrigerator in your home can stop this waste . . . permit buying in quantity at lower prices without fear of spoilage . . . and thus actually hand you $50 to $150 in cash each year — or even more, depending on your living scale and the size of your family.

Come in and learn more about this remarkable gift which can earn its own cost and more when installed in any home. Our special Christmas terms make it easy to add a Westinghouse to your list, and we guarantee delivery in ample time to insure a pleasant surprise for the whole family on Christmas Day.



Only 10% Now . . . No Further Payment for 90 Days

To make it more convenient for you to include a Westinghouse in your Christmas plans, all orders placed here before December 25th are subject to our special Christmas terms. You make only a small down payment with your order. The balance is spread over a series of convenient monthly installments, the first of which is not due until 90 days after date of purchase.

Only Westinghouse Combines All These Outstanding Features

P. A. A. HOLDUP SUSPECT HELD

As he was again identified as one of the highwaymen who snatched the $2,685 Pittsburgh Athletic Club payroll last Friday, John C. (Red) McKenna, 24, of 3038 Liberty avenue, arrested in connection with the robbery, was held for court this morning in Central Police Court by Magistrate Leo Rothenberg on charges of robbery, pointing firearms and carrying concealed weapons.

The prisoner was silent at the hearing. As he faced the magistrate, Victor Volka, a waiter, and Sam Ross, a club valet, again looked at McKenna and announced they were certain that he was one of the men who had staged the holdup.

McKenna previously denied taking part in the holdup. He was arrested in Liberty avenue with $70 in his pockets shortly following the robbery. He was taken to the bureau and identified at the "stand up."

Fog Halts King's Grouse Shooting

LONDON, Dec. 9.—(INS)—The worst fog experienced here this winter hampered London traffic for several hours today, although it did not interfere seriously with shipping on the Thames. The thick mist forced King George to forego a grouse shoot he had planned in Windsor Great Park for the first time since his illness two years ago.

NO. 652.

AN ORDINANCE—Designating depositories for the moneys of the City of Pittsburgh, to regulate deposits therein, and to provide for the payment of interest thereon.

SECTION 1. Be it ordained and enacted by the City of Pittsburgh, in Council assembled, and it is hereby ordained and enacted by the authority of the same, That all incorporated banks and trust companies now or hereafter located and doing business in the City of Pittsburgh, complying with the requirements and conditions hereinafter designated and appointed as City Depositories, of which certain depositories shall be designated as active, in addition to be inactive depositories, as hereinafter provided.

SECTION 2. All of said banks and/or trust companies shall furnish to the City of Pittsburgh bonds of the United States Government, State of Pennsylvania, County of Allegheny, City of Pittsburgh, and/or a political sub-division of the State of Pennsylvania, and/or a surety company approved by the Courts of the County of Allegheny, the City Treasurer and the City Controller, and/or corporate bonds at 75 per cent of their market value in an amount equal to the sum of deposits to insure the safety of deposits in said banks and/or trust companies, which bonds shall be delivered to the Treasurer of the City of Pittsburgh and his receipt given therefor.

THE CITY TREASURER shall deposit all bonds, except surety bonds, as given, for the purpose of securing the funds of the City of Pittsburgh, with the Federal Reserve Bank of Pittsburgh, a national bank or trust company to be designated by the Mayor as custodian, and take a deposit receipt therefor.

THE CITY TREASURER shall have the right to call for additional security or other security to replace those deposited at any time.

THE CITY TREASURER shall have the authority to refuse to accept any corporate bonds as security when in his judgment the same are not in a class to be accepted and held as security for city funds, but in no event shall the City Treasurer accept any corporate bonds which have not been approved by the Clearing House Committee of the Clearing House Association of Pittsburgh. Said appraisal of bonds approved by the Clearing House Committee shall be in writing to the City Treasurer and the City Controller. The Clearing House Committee shall on or before January 1, 1931, certify a list of corporate bonds which may be accepted by the City Treasurer as security for City deposits and every three months thereafter shall certify the value of the corporate bonds so held by the City or list additional bonds which may be accepted by the City as security for its funds, and shall notify the City Treasurer and the City Controller at said period if any bonds previously certified shall fail to meet the value required by appraisal by said Committee.

CORPORATE BONDS which yield at the market price more than 6 per cent per annum shall not be considered as satisfactory security.

NO BONDS or Security held by the said custodian shall be delivered to any bank or trust company except upon the written order of the City Treasurer, and any cost in reference to the securities deposited with the custodian shall be borne and paid by the banks or trust companies whose corporate bonds are so held by the City.

SECTION 3. Of the duly qualified depositories, four shall be selected in which active accounts shall be kept as well as inactive accounts. The one bidding the highest rate of interest shall be called and designated as the clearing bank for the City of Pittsburgh, and the City Treasurer shall be and he is hereby authorized and directed to deposit in said clearing bank a sum not to exceed $1,000,000.00, or as near that amount as is practicable, and the deposits in the other of said active depositories shall be $250,000.00 each, or as near that amount as is practicable, unless the funds of the City on deposit are below that sum. The aforesaid sum of $1,750,000.00 on deposit with the active depositories shall be deducted from the total funds of the City on deposit, and the balance shall be distributed among all of the qualified depositories, including the said active depositories, as hereinafter provided.

THE FOUR BANKS and/or trust companies offering the highest rate of interest, which shall not be less than two (2%) per centum, shall become the active depositories; provided, however, that only the bank or trust company designated as the clearing bank, having capital and surplus equal to or exceeding $1,000,000.00, and the other active depositories having capital and surplus equal to or exceeding $500,000.00, shall be qualified or eligible to become active depositories. Said active depositories shall be charged with the duty of preparing the payrolls for the City, as may be required by the proper officers of the City.

AND PROVIDED Further, that in case there should be more than four banks or trust companies, under the provisions of this Ordinance, which would be entitled to be chosen as active depositories, the Treasurer shall select first those offering the highest rate of interest, in the order of their bids. From those remaining, offering the same rate of interest, and whose offer is next highest to those selected, he shall select by lot, in the presence of the representatives of said banks or trust companies, a sufficient number to make up the required number, to-wit, four. And in case there should be more than four banks bidding the same highest rate of interest, the Treasurer shall select from that number by lot as above provided.

SECTION 4. The City Treasurer shall deposit all additional moneys not on deposit in the active depositories in all of the City depositories, distributing the same share and share alike among them. Provided, however, that no depository shall at any time have on deposit moneys of the City in excess of the amount of the securities hereinabove provided, held by the City Treasurer or the custodian, for the use of said bank or trust company holding said deposit; and, provided, further, that no bank or trust company shall at any time have on deposit moneys of the City in excess of 25 per cent of its capital and surplus; and, provided, further, that no bank or trust company shall become a depository until it has been in actual business within the City of Pittsburgh for a period of three years.

IN WITHDRAWING Deposits from the inactive depositories into the active depositories, or in case of any other withdrawal, the City Treasurer shall preserve the order of deposits as hereinbefore provided, that is to say, in case any bank by reason of its greater qualifying power has a larger deposit than the other banks, the withdrawal shall always be made from the bank having the largest deposit downward, until all of the depositories hold an equal amount, at which time the moneys shall be withdrawn equally from all the banks.

SECTION 5. The active depositories shall pay the City as per their respective bids, and furnish the security as hereinbefore provided for, and the inactive depositories shall pay the City the sum of two and three-fourths (2¾%) per centum interest per annum on daily balances of the funds of the City held by or deposited with them respectively; payments of interest to be made quarterly on December 31st, March 31st, June 30th and September 30th of each year.

SECTION 6. Should any depository close its doors at any time during business hours or fail to pay any warrant drawn upon it by the City Treasurer when the same is presented at its counter, it shall be the duty of the City Treasurer forthwith to report the same to the City Controller, who shall at once proceed to collect the balance due the City from said depository from the securities which have been deposited for said City funds by said depository according to law.

SECTION 7. The City Treasurer shall notify, in writing, the City Controller of the names of the banks which shall become depositories under the provisions of this ordinance.

SECTION 8. The City Treasurer shall, on or before the first of December of each year, notify every bank and trust company in the City of Pittsburgh of the terms of this ordinance and request that the said bank or trust company notify the City Treasurer on or before the 15th day of December of each year, whether or not it desires to become a depository of such funds, and any bank or trust company desiring to become a depository of the City funds shall file a sworn statement with the City Treasurer of its financial condition showing the amount of paid in capital and surplus, and its general financial condition, and shall agree in case of any reduction of its capital or surplus, to immediately notify the City Treasurer of the amount of such reduction.

THE BANKS AND TRUST COMPANIES complying with the foregoing requirements and with the requirements of this ordinance shall constitute the City depositories for the ensuing year, and shall be entitled to receive the deposits of the City according to the said statements and according to the terms of this ordinance.

ALL BANKS AND TRUST Companies desiring to become active City Depositories shall file their bid with the City Controller as hereinbefore provided, on or before the fifteenth day of December of each year, which bid shall be for the ensuing year commencing on the first day of January.

THE PLAN herein provided for City Depositories shall become effective January 1st, 1931.

ANY BANK OR TRUST Company accepting an award of money as a depository hereunder, shall enter into an agreement under seal with the City of Pittsburgh to accept all conditions and provisions of this ordinance, and contracts and agrees to accept all moneys tendered to it by the City Treasurer up to the amount of its award, and to pay the interest thereon in accordance with this ordinance, and to comply with all the provisions and conditions of this ordinance, and all the agreements thereto, and to safely keep and pay over all such moneys deposited with it. By accepting the award and executing the agreement aforesaid, said bank or trust company shall be held to agree to these provisions for itself, its successors and assigns.

SECTION 9. That any Ordinance or part of Ordinance, conflicting with the provisions of this Ordinance, be and the same is hereby repealed, so far as the same affects this Ordinance, and especially Ordinance No. 554, Series 1912, recorded in Ordinance Book, Volume 24, page 413.

'SNOOP AND PEEP' BACK ON RADIO; NEW SERIES HONORS COMPOSERS

We Now Present

By DARRELL V. MARTIN
Radio Editor

Snoop and Peep, NBC? sleuths who solve crime with rhyme, resume their Scotland Yard activity on WCAE at 8:15 tonight. They were among the "unemployed" last Tuesday night when Cardinal Hayes spoke in their place for President Hoover's Employment Commission. Mrs. George T. Pershing(ex-Mae Marsh) has spent weeks and weeks compiling native recipes for Cuckoo fans. KDKA at 2:0 30. And that's the evening's humour.

KDKA inaugurates a classical series at 9 o'clock—a Tribute to Great Composers. Camille Saint-Saens is to be honored with "Marche Heroique" amid other selections.

Senator James J. Davis makes an appeal for contributions to the Salvation Army Fund during the Philco Concert, WJAS, at 9:30.

COLIN O'MORE OUT

Al Llewelyn, of CBS, who once weighed metal in the Homestead Steel Works, later going to vaudeville when he met Bradford Browne in a rooming house at Newark, N. J., is to take Colin O'More's place in the 8:45 program on WJAS, effective next Tuesday. We are a bit concerned about Colin, who has never quite regained his voice after the brilliant success in "Theater Memories." Colin sings his farewell tonight.

QUESTION A DAY:

My boy friend is a radio student. He teases me by calling me a "BCL" and refuses to tell me what it means. Is it something terrible?—Ruth S.

Answer — Not so terrible. It means broadcast listener and is used almost exclusively by amateur radio operators who call themselves "Hams." They coined the term to distinguish the listener from the operator. Next time the boy friend calls you a "BCL" just reply "QRN" and act nonchalant. QRN is the technical term for static.

"BY THE WAY—"

Jack Smart (Joe Green in Mr. and Mrs.) has always been a cutup . . . he was tossed out of school for drawing pictures of his teacher . . . later took up cartooning and sports writing for newspapers . . . hopes some day to make the Carnegie International with a portrait . . . Mary Garden is a close friend of Harry Austin, KDKA's new announcer . . . Harry takes Fred Rodgers' place in the Salute tonight at 10 . . . Joe Villella, formerly WCAE, is announcing Larry Duncan's Orchestra for KQV . . . Wayne King, KDKA at 8, is the boy who plays the Inter-Collegiate Ball here Christmas night . . . When his new shoes squeaked just before a presentation of the KDKA Players, Ed Harvey removed the offending leathers and directed the play in his stocking feet.

The LOUDSPEAKER

By LOUIS REID

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—Radio is unquestionably a young man's business. The majority of the leading executive jobs with the broadcasting companies are in the hands of men who have not yet reached their fortieth year. A large part of them are presided over by men in their late twenties and early thirties.

William S. Paley, chief titan of the Columbia system, is not yet 30 years old. M. H. Aylesworth, of the N. B. C., is just over 40. Engineers, program officials, managers of artists' bureaus, continuity experts, publicity heads and announcers are all young men.

Dance maestros, of all classes of people heard on the air, are also young men. I do not know of a leader over 45 years of age who regularly agitates the air waves. When dance maestros reach 50 they invariably hang their backs upon jazz and give their batons over to semi-classical concert programs. Nathaniel Frankel once compiled jazz arrangements of operatic arias for the hostess of the town, but his heart was not in the work.

And jazz has never made any appeal to John Philip Sousa or Arthur Pryor or Edwin Franko Goldman or others of the more renowned band leaders.

Jessica Dragonette Highest Paid Soprano

The highest paid soprano heard regularly on the air is Jessica Dragonette. Five feet, two inches tall and weighing less than 100 pounds, Miss Dragonette was once the angel voice in Max Reinhardt's "Miracle." She was not visible to the audience during the performance, and her song was without accompaniment. From that part the singer went on to more earthly success, appearing as Kathie, the sentimental peasant in "The Student Prince." When the N. B. C. was organized in November, 1926, she was persuaded to give up the stage for the chief prima donna parts on the programs.as. She has never regretted the move.

The most popular hymn written expressly for radio is Phillips Lord's "You Go to Your Church and I'll Go to Mine." Dud Pickard—his first name is Obadiah—is the most accomplished virtuoso of the jewsharp on the radio. The swankiest names today in the world of entertainment are those of Harlem's blues singers and tap dancers.

Six representatives of the N. B. C. who took part in the great broadcast from an undersea boat, now wear the honorary insignia of the U. S. Submarine Service.

TRAFFIC KILLS 15 IN MONTH

Two children and 13 adults were fatally injured in traffic accidents last month, according to City Traffic Engineer Lewis W. McIntyre, in his analysis of the month's traffic fatalities for the Better Traffic Committee. The effectiveness of Thanksgiving No-Accident Month is shown in the report.

For the first 11 months this year the traffic toll was 176, within four of the entire toll of last year, according to records at the coroner's office. McIntyre points out that 33 child fatalities during the 12-month period ending November 30, is next to the lowest corresponding 12-month period in the records of the Bureau of Traffic Planning.

To Break Up a Cold In a Jiffy

Feel Like a New Person In Just a Little While

People have found out that new-fangled ideas and notions don't break up colds. So millions have turned back to first principles and use what they know breaks one up in a jiffy. Even a "little" cold is too dangerous to trifle with.

The thing to do is to get Hill's Cascara Quinine at any drug store. Take two tablets now. Then follow directions on box. Drink lots of water, too—that's all.

Soon you'll start to feel like a new person. Things will loosen up, your head will clear; aching go—you'll be back on the job with a wallop.

Get Hill's now. It is a scientific formula made to do one thing well: to knock a cold—not to cure a thousand ailments. Get your money back if it doesn't work with twice the speed of anything else you've ever tried.

SIDEWALKS of PITTSBURGH

When Mike Daley, man-about-town, writes his biography, he'll feature an accident labelled "Publisher for a Day." It was many years ago that Mike, who was trying hard to get a foothold on that good old ladder to fame and fortune, issued a one-day newspaper, "Sporting News," on the day of the Wolgast-Moran fight. The daily papers were enjoying a holiday, so Mike reasoned he could make a lot of money in 24 hours. When the fight was in its eighth round, Mike became impatient and started the presses rolling with a screaming headline announcing Wolgast had won. His guess was right.

The papers are filled these days with stories of this holdup and that. And there are a fair share which never see the light of print, the victims in such cases being gamblers or gambling places. More often than not, such victims don't report the holdups to the police, not alone because the odds are against recovering the money, but because a gambler probably reasons that he'd have lost it anyhow.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Dec. 9.

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

We all have what we refer to as the saddest sight we ever saw. Well, mine is this, a cheering section, all organized to cheer, and then nothing comes to cheer over. It ain't so bad for an individual to have your favorite lose and not be able to holler. You feel bad, but you kinder can keep your grief to yourself. But when you are sent somewhere en masse for nothing else only to holler, and then you can't, why that is what you would call organized grief. Your wretchedness is so promiscuous. You are even dressed and seated, just to draw attention to your wretchedness. Brothers, it must be——. Yours,

WILL.

STAND NOT TAKEN BY PINCHOT

Conferees Convinced Bills Submitted Two Years Ago Won't Suit Legislature

Despite reports in Council that Gov.-elect Gifford Pinchot would not oppose a revision of the Blue Laws, Pinchot's secretary, Stephen P. Stahlnecker, declared that the Governor-elect has not made any statement concerning his views on the Sunday laws.

The announcement was made in answer to statements by Councilmen Clifford B. Connelley and M. J. Muldowney, in reporting on the progress made by the Pittsburgh and Philadelphia committees handling preliminary plans looking to the revision of the Sunday laws.

CHANGES NEEDED

The bill of Representative M. A. Musmanno designed to modify the blue laws must be changed, according to members of Pittsburgh's Council who are working to modify the obsolete laws.

This became known when Councilman Harry A. Little urged Council yesterday not to go on record in favor of any bill that previously has been presented. Council, by a resolution several months ago, expressed a desire for such modification, Councilman Muldowney said:

"The Governor will not be against a change, according to information I have received."

Councilman Connelley said:

PINCHOT FRIENDLY

"I have been given reason to understand that the new Governor has had a change of heart and will listen to reason."

At a conference to be held in Harrisburg some time before the session opens an entirely new bill will be outlined for presentation, according to Little. The date of that conference has not been set. Little said that Mayor Charles H. Kline has not yet been invited and he did not know who would be asked to attend. The date of the conference will be arranged by Philadelphia officials, he said.

LOW CASH CURBS CITY RELIEF

Officers of the Department of Welfare today awaited the result of a conference of Mayor Charles H. Kline and members of City Council on the question of providing funds with which to further work of the bureau for the remainder of the year. Work of the bureau was suspended today by Mrs. Enoch Rauh, director, on suggestion in a letter from the Mayor.

The actual sum allowed the welfare fund for relief work this year was $95,000. This is rapidly being exhausted, it was said. In his letter the Mayor asked Mrs. Rauh to stop work of the bureau today until the condition could be remedied by Council action.

Pending the action, the bureau will continue to investigate cases reported to it, but will give no orders for money for relief work.

LAWYER HOLDS DRY LAW VOID

The question of constitutionality of the national prohibition act was raised in Federal Court by Attorney J. Frank McAllister, in filing a motion for arrest of judgment in the case of Adolph Morvi, of Chislett street, who was convicted on a charge of possessing and transporting five gallons of moonshine whisky.

Judge Nelson McVicar denied the motion by declaring that the higher courts had already decided upon the validity of the act. The court announced that Morvi will be sentenced tomorrow. The jury found him guilty of committing the offense in Sharpsburg on September 12. Attorney McAllister said he will appeal to the Circuit Court.

School Fire Halts Auto Repair Class

Students in the automobile mechanics department of the manual training course at Union High School, Turtle Creek, were unable to attend their classes today because of a fire which last night damaged the interior of the building housing the department. Flames were confined to the structure, a two-story annex to the main high school building. The fire started from an overheated furnace, according to a police report. The loss was estimated at $400 by firemen.

HIGH ARMY JOB FOR MOSELEY

Appointment of Maj. Gen. George Van Horn Moseley, executive officer to the assistant secretary of war, as deputy chief of staff to succeed Maj. Gen. Edwin E. Booth, who retires December 21, was announced from Washington yesterday.

Gen. Moseley, in company with a number of other Army officers, was in Pittsburgh Saturday to attend a meeting of the advisory board of the Pittsburgh chemical warfare district.

25c BUS FARE TO AIRPORT DEFENDED

Pittsburgh Railways Asks Higher Rate Than Rival Fixes in Permit Fight

Bus fare of 25 cents as against another applicant's tariff rate of 20 cents cash or a 15-cent token would be charged by the Pittsburgh Motor Coach Company in the operation of a line from downtown by way of Brentwood to the municipal airport and Bettis Field, it was testified today.

Thomas A. Fitzgerld, vice president of the Pittsburgh Railways Company, cited the proposed fare at a hearing before the Public Service Commission on the subsidiary company's application for a certificate. County Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong also testified in behalf of the utility company.

The application was being opposed by the Brentwood Motor Coach Company. This concern was given a hearing on a like application several weeks ago. The lower fare was proposed by the Brentwood company at that time. Declaring a bus line could not operate successfully at a fare lower than 25 cents, Fitzgerald testified the railways company faced a deficit this year of several hundred thousand dollars and decreased gross earnings of $3,500,000.

Armstrong declared he sought to have responsible people operate the buse line that would at times handle crowds expected to reach 100,000 persons. He admitted himself and Commissioner E. V. Babcock had requested the railways company to work out a plan. The desire was not to have any interest obtain the certificate and then sell out at a big price, he said.

Gas Leaking From Main Ignites, Burns Newsboy

Burned about the face and hands when a gas main at Forbes street and Craft avenue sprung a leak and the gas ignited last night, Andrew Pavlick, 12, of 2434 Forbes street, was reported recovering in his home today.

Pavlick, a newsboy, was caught by a sheet of flame when the gas ignited. He was treated at the Eye and Ear Hospital and taken home. Firemen played water from both sides and prevented the flames from spreading to buildings. Traffic was rerouted over Fifth avenue for an hour and a half until an emergency crew shut off the gas.

POLICE GUARD INJURED MAN

A man found unconscious at Shetland and Larimer avenues last night was under police guard in the Pittsburgh Hospital today because a .32-caliber revolver was discovered in his possession after he had been taken to the hospital, police said.

The patient, who later regained consciousness, told police he was Thomas Mullegh, 32, of 1303 Olivant street, it was reported. Mullegh, believed suffering from fracture of the skull, again lapsed into a coma before police could inquire how he was injured.

Michael Casale, of 644 Thompson street, and Carmen Morunt, of 1015 Homewood avenue, called Patrolman Edward Hayes when they found the man lying on the sidewalk.

ASKS REPEAL OF SOME LEVIES

Inheritance and Mercantile Changes to Be Sought at Coming Assembly Session

Opposition to further state taxation, with support for changes in the inheritance tax and the mercantile license tax, were expressed here today by representatives of the State Chamber of Commerce at Harrisburg.

Robert Haight, legislative expert of the chamber, outlined the organization's views on bills expected to be introduced that will affect business interests. More than 200 businessmen attended a luncheon in the William Penn Hotel at which State President Alba B. Johnson, of Philadelphia, presided. Frank Wilbur Main, local councilor of the state chamber, opened the session.

OUTLINES PROGRAM

"Attention should be paid by the next Legislature to the repeal of some forms of taxation. There should be the repeal of the mercantile license tax and the direct inheritance tax on estates, at least to some degree. Levies on bequests from husband to wife, or vice versa, should be reduced or wiped out, particularly as to small estates.

"Old age pensions legislation will be renewed. We are still opposed to the enactment of any law which would drain the revenues of the state. Some plan of contributory insurance on the part of industry and industrial workers might change our stand. We are against the proposal of a state pension because it would destroy thrift and initiative in the individual.

COMPENSATION CHANGES

"We oppose any workingmen's compensation law changes that would add to the employers' financial burden, though there is no objection to a proposed double indemnity for accidents to minors illegally employed.

"Opposition to the proposed garnishee law will be continued. It would entail a tremendous amount of work on the employer and arouse ill-feeling with the employe. We are again considering the proposal of a bill to penalize the reckless motorist that provides reimbursement to the victim for personal and property damage. We would modify the demands first proposed and which failed to become a law."

A breakfast meeting of the nominating committee and directors opened the day here. The directors again met during the morning to discuss future plans.

Cryder, J. W. Leibegott, Simon A. Merkel, J. F. Moore, P. S. Space and Jacob Yeager.

Fined in 'Numbers' Sale, Held in Auto Theft

Edward Cousins, a Negro, of 724 Bellefonte street, whose automobile was stolen from the Gumto towing garage, 6029 Rodman street, where the police had stored it for safekeeping when Cousins was arrested for his alleged dealings in clearing house lotteries, was fined $100 on a lottery charge in East End Police Court this morning, and held over in connection with the theft of the car.

Shortly after Cousins was admitted to bail last night, the theft of the car from the garage was reported to police. Cousins told Magistrate Charles Palale that he knew nothing concerning the theft of his car from the garage. Meanwhile, police are searching for the car and conducting an investigation.

Mrs. Howard told the detectives that her sister planned to marry three weeks ago, but when the Howard family moved from West Eighth street, Miss Shellmick, who lived with her sister, disappeared.

Steve Bayza, of Springdale, told police that a stranger leaped on the running board of his automobile, slugged him and drove off with Miss Shellmick, who was riding with him at the time. The car later was found in Tarentum.

WANT TO LOOK YOUNG?

The secret of keeping young is to feel young—to do this you must watch your liver and bowels—there's no need of having a sallow complexion—dark rings under your eyes—pimples—a bilious look in your face—dull eyes with no sparkle. Your doctor will tell you ninety per cent of all sickness comes from inactive bowels and liver.

Dr. Edwards, a well-known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound as a substitute for calomel to act on the liver and bowels, which he gave to his patients for years.

Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets are gentle in their action yet always effective. They help bring about that natural buoyancy which all should enjoy by toning up the liver and clearing the system of impurities.

Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets are known by their olive color. 15c, 30c, 60c.

RITES FOR JUDGE T. J. FORD ARRANGED FOR THURSDAY

JURIST DIES AFTER LONG ILLNESS

Served on County Bench 24 Years Before Retiring in August; Rose From Ranks

Funeral services for Judge Thomas J. Ford, who died yesterday at his home, Delafield road, Aspinwall, will be held at the home Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Interment will be private Friday at 11 o'clock in Greenwood Cemetery, near Sharpsburg.

Judge Ford

Judge Ford retired from the bench last August and since that time had been in ill health. He recently became seriously ill.

Judge Ford was interested in travel and had planned to make several trips when stricken with the illness which caused his death. His wife, Mrs. Ida K. Ford, and a niece, Miss Marie Mulholland, the only members of his immediate family, were with him when he died.

Attorney Harold M. Irvine, in behalf of the memorial committee of the Bar Association, announced Judge Ford's death in Criminal Court today. Court announced that adjournment would be taken out of respect to the late jurist at the close of court today.

Without advantage of a law school course, Judge Ford by dint of indefatigable study, rose from a railroad ticket seller to the Allegheny County judiciary.

BORN IN CINCINNATI

He was born September 3, 1856, in Cincinnati, O., the son of John B. and Anna B. Ford. A year later his parents moved to Etna. When he was seven years old his father was killed in the Civil War.

The son attended public schools in Etna and later the Soldiers' Orphans School in Uniontown, Pa. While attending school there at 15 he was summoned home by his mother who needed his aid.

At 19 he was a ticket seller in the Federal Street Station of the Pennsylvania Railroad. He loved books, borrowed many and spent his nights in study. The Rev. A. H. Calvert, pastor of the Etna Presbyterian Church, was his preceptor.

M. A. Woodward, a prominent lawyer of that day, took an interest in the young man and gave him the opportunity of studying law in his office. He was admitted to the bar, February 23, 1878, at the age of 22.

IN LEGISLATURE

In addition to his law practice, which grew steadily, Mr. Ford took an active interest in public affairs. In 1897 he was elected to the State House of Representatives and served three terms. He was chairman of the Republican County Committee from 1902 until he was appointed by Gov. Samuel W. Pennypacker to the Common Pleas bench in 1906.

He was elected without opposition to his first full 10-year term in November, 1907, and was re-elected in 1917 and 1927.

Because of failing health Judge Ford tendered his resignation from the bench to Gov. John S. Fisher, effective last August 31. He was retired on half-pay for the remainder of his life.

Judge Ford was a member of many fraternal organizations and of the Duquesne and Pittsburgh Field clubs. He attended the First Methodist Episcopal Church of Sharpsburg.

PITCAIRN HIGH TO ABANDON FOOTBALL

Lack of Student Interest Cited by School Board In Announcing Decision

Pitcairn High School will not be represented on the football field in 1931 — maybe never again.

This edict was issued at a meeting of the borough school board last night, when charges were made that members of this year's grid squad took little interest in the sport, failed to take care of equipment, and that several sweaters and even the bruised and battered pigskin that has served as the piece de resistance in this year's games are missing from the school lockers.

According to Walter C. Barnhart, president of the school board, Pitcairn High is not football-minded. He indicated that the team has lost as consistently as Notre Dame has won this season, and that the student body had not worked itself into any frenzy of enthusiasm over its grid heroes.

The action abandoning the game came after members of the team were called on the carpet to account for the missing accoutrements. No guilty ones could be found, so the boys were told to enter classes today with their minds free of the incubus of the fall sport and bent only on higher education.

C. C. Pearsoll, superintendent of schools, said a fine new gymnasium would be dedicated December 19 and that physical education would be featured in the schools. Two teachers in this branch have been employed, Miss Sara Louden, Pittsburgh, and Maynard Wood, Waynesburg.

ON THE BRIDLE PATHS THROUGH SCHENLEY PARK

Lack of Standards Held Obstacle to National Theater by Critic

According to Oliver M. Sayler, dramatic and literary critic and author, who addressed the Twentieth Century Club yesterday, the two obstacles in the way of a national theater are, first, the general lack of standards of judgment, and, second, the lack of confidence in what we are able to do.

Mr. Sayler was discussing "Our Cosmopolitan Theater," international headquarters for which, he says, are in New York (because it is the gateway to Europe and its theater-going population is largely international), while the rest of the country is the potential home of a native theater. Mr. Sayler sees a salutary thing in the various rivalries and economic conditions in the theater today, in that it will stop Broadway from sending out whatever it chooses; life for a new theater begins with a death of the old, as it were.

Mr. Sayler read from his latest book some of what he termed "fairly devastating charges against the current theater"—overbuilding by real estate promoters; rule by greed and bad manners of the box office; sneering at the theater's rival—the talkies, and having permitted "a bigoted minority of meddlers" to write repressive ordinances against it. He balanced these charges, however, with an expression of confidence in the need of civilized man for the theater.

Among the plays which he discussed were "Grand Hotel," which he compared with "Roar China," saying that to the extent that the latter makes its problem important to us it is less effective and less interesting than the former, Eva LeGallienne's "Siegfried" he said, makes you leave the theater asking, "Well, what of it?"

"Marseilles," the "amazingly accurate and moving picture" of life on the French city's waterfront; "Elizabeth the Queen," "Tonight or Never" Belasco's "engaging bit of fluff" from Budapest; "Once in a Lifetime" and "This Is New York" were highly commended.

So long as there are blind to be served, poor to be helped, and beauty to be loved and studied, the Homewood Women's Club will go on, Mrs. George L. Carson said yesterday in discharging her duties as toastmistress at the club's twentieth anniversary luncheon in the Hotel Schenley. One hundred members and guests attended the affair, for which especially attractive decorations had been provided. The long honor table, at which sat officers and past presidents, was dotted its entire length by lighted tapers alternating in the club colors, violet and white. White roses and carnations tied with violet tulle further carried out the color scheme.

Mrs. Garnet E. Cooper, president, welcomed the guests and presented Mrs. Carson, who, in turn, introduced the past presidents and presented each with a white rose, accompanying the floral gift with a rhyme written by Mrs. R. L. Helquist. A letter of congratulation and a gift of flowers were received from the Junior Club and also from Mrs. Richard W. Martin, a former president. Mrs. G. R. Yesterday's meeting of the Woman's Club of Wilkinsburg, held in the Y. W. C. A. Community House was in the nature of a Christmas party, with a program, tea and decorations emphasizing the holiday spirit in a most attractive manner. The program, presented by Mrs. Walter E. Close, included songs, character impersonations, musical readings and a one-act play, "Bargains."

The arrangement of the program was particularly pleasing, opening and closing with appropriate musical readings. Mrs. Close was accompanied by Miss Gladys Schade and included in her selections a composition by Mrs. F. F. Rohrer, leader for the afternoon. Assembly caroling was also a feature.

Christmas decorations were used at the tea following the program, a real Christmas tree centering the table, with tall red candles completing the holiday effect. Mrs. J. G. Chalfant and Mrs. R. C. Beerbower poured.

In the span of life from infancy to old age, gifts or rewards are given to us as we by our own efforts make ourselves able to receive them, Robert L. Finlayson told the Homestead Woman's Club in his address on "Tools of Progress" yesterday. Desires are the tools of progress and back of all big enterprises are desires, he declared. A good heart, a clean mind and a healthy body are the most effective tools, he summed up.

At the next meeting, on December 22, Mr. Finlayson's wife will be the speaker, and will discuss the origin of Christmas carols, which a double quartet of members will illustrate.

Gay Society Throngs at Theaters

Seldom have I seen such a crowded house and brilliantly gowned galaxy of women as last night at the Alvin laughed and gasped at "Berkeley Square." And the musical comedy, "Sweet Adeline," at the Nixon also attracted many folks.

In the foyer during intermissions I saw the John A. Byerly, with Mrs. Byerly in a gown of Paddy green georgette with a wrap of black velvet and white fox. I noticed the Homer Saint-Gaudens as they entered, with Mrs. Saint-Gaudens wearing a black crepe gown with a coat of brown caracul.

Mrs. A. Cameron Mann chose green moire for her costume, with a coat of brown caracul, and Nancy Brown looked charming in black lace with an ermine finger tip jacket. I caught a glimpse of Mrs. Ralph W. Harbison, too, wearing black lace with a black velvet and mink wrap.

Betty Scott was there, gowned in ecru lace with a wrap of red and gold lace. Francis Kier and her fiance, Baron Jean Pellene, were chatting in the lounge, and the popular deb wore a distinctive gown with the square cut bodice of black velvet and the flaring, bouffant skirt formed of alternating rows of black velvet and ecru lace. With it she wore an ermine jacket.

I caught a glimpse of Mrs. George S. Baton, too, and I saw Mary Childs, who wore black lace with a wrap of black velvet furred with white fox. The William A. Duckhams, I noticed, with Mrs. Duckham in eggshell satin and a black velvet and white fox wrap. Mrs. Frank Ingersoll chose white crepe for her gown, with a wrap of black velvet.

The haunting charm of Helen Morgan and the rollicking gaiety of Irene Franklin crowded the Nixon last night.

Nixon Popular

Laura Evans, wearing a brown chiffon and lace gown, was there, and Elizabeth Jenkins in black tulle and gold.

Mrs. W. L. Standish was there, wearing gold lame and Kolinsky. And during intermission I noticed Anne Douglas Stewart in black velvet with a cloak of gold and black lame having a large shirred collar of black velvet, and Mrs. Sydney A. Stewart looking charming in black velvet. With them was Mrs. Stewart's mother, Mrs. Stephen Stone, who chose sapphire blue lace.

Mrs. T. M. Jones, III, wore a black lace gown, fashioned with a brief train, and Mrs. Gordon Fisher looked striking in seafoam green lace and a gold brocaded wrap with a collar of sable.

Mrs. William Whitcomb wore cream satin, and Mrs. Charles Flaccus, beige lace, and a wrap of mink. Mrs. J. Henry O'Neill was there and the William Pureys and the Eugene LeMoyne Connellys.

Elizabeth Spencer Murray, daughter of the James Daniel Murrays, of Coraopolis Heights, who made her debut recently at the Bachelors' Cotillion in Baltimore, will arrive home on Friday, December 19, for the Christmas holidays. Elizabeth is a student at Manhattanville College, Manhattanville, N. Y.

Among those giving their patronage for the benefit production of "Daddy Dumplins" Monday night at the Pitt Theater, to be sponsored by the Presbyterian Hospital social service committee, are many social leaders.

Among them are Mrs. Clinton S. Bradley, Mrs. Samuel E. Hackett, Mrs. Charles A. Fisher, Mrs. Allen Collingwood, Mrs. Charles R. Miller, Jr., Miss Edna Black, Miss Ida Allerton, Mrs. John M. Kennedy, Mrs. William E. Allen, Mrs. Pitt O. Heasley, Mrs. Arthur E. Braun, Mrs. Joseph Jones, Mrs. Joseph D. Watson, Mrs. Charles E. Willock, Mrs. Allen Davison, Mrs. John F. Miller and Mrs. Frank A. Bond.

And I know of some more girls who'll sell candy at the benefit. They are Sally Jane Fields, Eleanor Cowdrey, Polly Rowles, Prudence Goodale and Margaret Schuckman. Mrs. J. H. Beale, Jr., is chairman of the young aides.

SHEER FABRICS LEND ETHEREAL APPEAL TO THE EVENING MODE

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Dec. 9.—Delicate dresses are strong in favor this season. We do not remember ever seeing during the winter season so many frocks of tulle, fine chiffon, organdie, sheer lace and net in pastel shades which do not generally appear on the sartorial menu during the latter part of the year.

Usually velvets, brocades, failles and other heavier materials get their good times in the winter when formal functions usually demand a degree of opulence. But there is no gainsaying the appearl of the sheer fabrics, for they lend an ethereal look to the most stolid type, and an ethereal appearance means youth. And the delicately hued gown is also conducive to a youthful appearance. And so with all these attributes it is not difficult to see why women are refusing to relinquish this type of frock.

VIONNET IS ONE of the designers responsible for the delicate frock for the winter. The model here shown is made of biscuit colored tulle and lace, the two combining to create a lovely frock. The bodice is entirely of tulle, which is drawn tightly over the figure. The decolletage in back is bordered with a softly draped piece of tulle drawn down on either side and tied in a huge bow with long ends which lose themselves in crisp folds of tulle forming the center back panel. A similar panel is found in front. At each side is row upon row of delicate lace ruffles. The bouffant skirt is irresistibly youthful.

TOLLMANN IS RESPONSIBLE for the smart suit, a sketch of which is also to be found here. It is of black cloth and broadtail with both in jacket and skirt, a combination hitherto sacred to coats. The jacket fits tightly at the waistline and the sleeves are shirred into the tops of tight-fitting cuffs. With the suit is a blouse of white satin.

At the wedding of Miss Evelyn Ferguson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William S. Ferguson, of Lake Shore boulevard, Cleveland, and Paul F. Yost, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank L. Yost, also of Cleveland, in the Church of the Covenant, Cleveland, Miss Evelyn Newton, of Pittsburgh, was a bridesmaid. The wedding took place at 5 o'clock, with the Rev. Dr. Philip Smead Bird officiating, before an embankment of ferns and yellow chrysanthemums.

Cleveland Wedding

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of ivory satin with a court train, and a veil of tulle showering from a cap of Duchess lace. She carried a handkerchief of Renaissance lace, carried by her mother at her wedding.

Mrs. Gilbert R. Johnsson was her sister's matron of honor. Besides Miss Newton, the bridesmaids included Miss Dorothy Eisele, Miss Estelle Yost and Mrs. Kenneth James, of Akron. They wore crepe gowns in fall colors. Mrs. Johnson wore capucine crepe and carried yellow and bronze chrysanthemums, as did the bridesmaids. Harold Douda served as the best man, and the ushers included Gilbert R. Johnson, Kent Van Horn, Donald Folger and Arthur Cole.

After a reception in the Ferguson home, Mr. and Mrs. Yost left for an eastern honeymoon. They will make their home in Cleveland. Mr. Yost is a graduate of the Case School and a member of Kappa Sigma.

Dr. John Grass, of Pittsburgh, was present at the ceremony.

Married Tuesday

Mrs. R. Lawrence Buchanon, of McKeesport, was the bride's only attendant, and Lawrence Buchanon was the best man. Charles Clinard, of Winston-Salem, N. C., was an usher. A wedding breakfast was served after the ceremony, and later Dr. and Mrs. Snyder left for a Southern motor trip. They will make their home in Avalon.

The bride is a graduate of the DeSales Heights Academy, of Parkersburg, W. Va., and Mr. Snyder is a graduate of the Military Academy of Marshall College, Lancaster, Pa., and of the University of Pittsburgh.

Nobody Loves A FAT MAN

So goes the old saying—but nobody believes it.

However — leading physicians claim that fat is unhealthy and should be considered as such.

A noted doctor in Germany tells his fat patients to make this four-weeks' test—not hard to do.

Eat no pie—pastries—ice cream—or sweet desserts—eat a good but moderate meal of lean meat, fish or chicken, along with a vegetable such as cabbage, cauliflower, spinach, eggplant or carrots—also a salad of tomatoes, lettuce or fruit—go easy on potatoes, rice, butter, cream, cheese and sugar.

Take one-half teaspoon of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water before breakfast every morning—weigh yourself—every week.

You can get a jar of Kruschen Salts that lasts 4 weeks for 85 cents at any drug store in the world. These magic salts are six salts in one—and are full of vitalizing minerals your system needs to aid the internal organs to function naturally and healthily and free the blood from toxins and acids.

When you grow thin with Kruschen—you gain in energy and activity—you work better, sleep sound and feel the spirit of ambitious youth within you.

Mothers, Mix This At Home for a Bad Cough

You'll be pleasantly surprised when you make up this simple home mixture and try it for a distressing cough or chest cold. It takes but a moment to mix and costs little, but it can be depended upon to give quick and lasting relief.

Get 2½ ounces of Pinex from any druggist. Pour this into a pint bottle; then fill it with plain granulated sugar syrup or strained honey. The full pint thus made costs no more than a small bottle of ready-made medicine, yet it is much more effective. It is pure, keeps perfectly and children love its pleasant taste.

This simple remedy has a remarkable three-fold action. It goes right to the seat of trouble, loosens the germ-laden phlegm, and soothes away the inflammation. Part of the medicine is absorbed into the blood, where it acts directly upon the bronchial tubes and thus helps inwardly to throw off the whole trouble with surprising ease.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway Pine, containing the active agent of creosote, in a refined, palatable form, and known as one of the greatest healing agents for severe coughs, chest colds and bronchial troubles.

TELL IT TO SALLY

By SALLY MARTIN

Charm Goes Long Way in Winning Admiration

Is petting a sure-fire recipe for popularity?

Bonnie said it was. And scores of girls—including Cecelia—agreed with her. Dales, according to them, were scarce as Ben's eggs, unless a girl went in for Heavy Necking with every young Romeo who asked her out.

We had our doubts about that. We'd seen more than one Pretty Patty who kept herself sweet and rare . . . yet had all the big He-Men for miles around in a trance. But we printed their tales—and asked for votes.

And it seems that there was a flaw in their reasoning, somewhere, because here comes Fan to complain that she does pet, and still she's left out in the cold!

She, too, had been hungry for fun and life and love . . . and she'd tried to get them in the only way that Bonnie and Cecelia had said would work—and she was left right where she began.

Is Not Popular

"What's wrong, Sally?" she wails. "What's the answer to this riddle of How to Be Popular, anyway?"

What do you think's the answer, Clara?

"Dear Sally Martin—

"I've just read Bonnie's letter, and it has me all up in the air. You asked for letters from girls who don't pet, and still have dates. Well, goodness knows that doesn't describe me!

"Because I do pet—but it doesn't do me any good. I'm left alone anyway! Can you tie that? According to Bonnie you have to pet to be popular! Well, I wonder what she thinks of the pickle I'm in. Petting yes . . . and about as popular as the smallpox!

"I am 18 years old. I work in an office, and I have plenty of girl friends, but I just don't seem to register with boys. I am above the average in looks. I dance nicely. I have a 'line.' And the other girls say that I have what is known as 'personality' . . . and above all—I do pet, as I said before. But—still I stay at home!

She Is Puzzled

"Whenever I go out the evening begins—and generally ends—with petting. I used to dislike this very much, and still I am not crazy about it, but still it comes sort of natural. I can honestly say that I have never started the petting, or even suggested starting it. But you don't have to. No one that I have ever gone out with so far has ever neglected it, in spite of what some boys in this column have had to say about the "girls being to blame."

"At first I objected. But the boys invariably acted insulted, and like I had cheated them or something, and proceeded to treat me miserably for the rest of the evening, and made it only too plain that they wanted to be rid of me as soon as possible.

"But now that I don't object any more, I can't seem to put myself over either. What's the answer, do you think? It certainly has me puzzled. I've been going out for the last two years, and I've known plenty of boys—and plenty about them—all types. Funny, isn't it? I get a date—go out with him—pet plenty—he takes me home as late as possible (he likes my company—blush!)—and, finally, I never hear from him again! I've tried no petting, and I've tried plenty of petting—and the result's the same. A riddle, isn't it?

"What's wrong? Can you tell me? I'm getting desperate, Fan."

What's wrong with this picture, Fan?"

You are. Yes, I mean it. You're going at this thing all wrong. You've got the idea that Men Like 'Em Wild, and so you're trying to be wild. And, I suspect, very little else.

Goodness alone, or willingness alone, never won any man's notice, no matter who or what he was.

And what does win 'em? Charm, little girl. And any healthy, intelligent girl who is willing to try to do so can make herself charming.

The Secret

And what is charm? It isn't a decoration—like a new necklace, or a trick marcel. It isn't something you do for yourself. It's something you do to the other fellow.

It's the knack of being human and sympathetic, lively and understanding . . .

Of resting and amusing and interesting the people we're with.

Make the other fellow feel that he's a good guy, and he'll think that you're one. That's charm.

And how's it done? What's the technique?

Anything that makes you daintier, merrier, more friendly and alluring and all-around attractive, will make you charming. Not just kissing. Nothing but kissing becomes as tiresome as nothing but spinach. Learn to play tennis as well as to play hearts. Be a pal at pee-wee golf as well as at petting. Learn to speak restfully, move gracefully, tease daintily, and think all around the clock.

Men are many things. Be many things to them. And be many things to yourself—all the delightful, adventurous, friendly things that every girl should be, to and in herself. And will that bring them running? You won't be able to keep them away!

Oh, These Women

By LEOLA ALLARD

"Would it be advisable," writes a young lady, "to marry a man you don't love, but who has all the good qualities you admire in a man and who can give you every luxury?"

In other words, you have a nice fluffy cushion held out to you and are tempted to fall upon it and settle down.

Are you afraid you won't ever fall in love? Are you selfish and incapable of love? Did you tell this man you didn't love him?

If you tell a man you don't love him, but feel he is too fine to let go, and he still wants you, it's his lookout if he gets cheated. Personally, I feel that the only excuse for getting married is that you are in love and can't help it.

The difficulty of wedding someone you can't get thrilled over is that perhaps you will, immediately afterward, meet someone who is THE ONE man. Then what? Would you hold to your bargain and put the real one out of your life, or would you think you were entitled to set aside your vows?

I'd like to get the honest opinion of a girl who married or is planning to marry a man she doesn't love. How does she figure it is right and what would she do if the man still loved her and she met someone she could love?

It always seems to me that these letters sound selfish because the girls never ask if it's fair to the man who really loves them. They only want to know if I were in their place would I marry a man feeling I didn't love him.

I want one of them to write and tell me what sort of pretense they make to the man whose life and fortune they are about to share.

It is not reasonable to suppose that they make none. I've had two women tell me they pretended love. The marriages didn't last. I've heard men tell how their wives pretended to love them and the husband of one of the women who told me she pretended, was the one who bore her out in his story. "She was a beautiful blonde and I thought she was passionately fond of me," he said.

What sort of skullduggery is that, anyway? If I classed that sort of thing where it belongs, these women would have the horrors when they read about it. But I wouldn't for a moment venture to say that these women are decent. They are playing with sacred fire and using it to burn their best friends to a crisp. Nice game, that!

It's the gimme age that is partly responsible. Girls see fine fur coats on practically everybody and they will get one even if they have to marry to get it. There are plenty of things that a girl would rather worry about than getting to the office at 9 o'clock.

It takes a strong girl today to pass up a goose that she knows lays golden eggs.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

Wednesday, December 10

A day of much progress and prosperity is fostered by the most auspicious rule of important stars. There is sign of much constructive effort, both in the employment of others and in lines of original genius and skill, leading to important change and possibly public recognition or popular acclaim. It is a time for forging ahead with much initiative and courage, although it would be well to sign all writings with precaution and sagacity. Also be discreet in the personal relations and activities.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year of adventure and enterprise, with the prospect of change of environment and business connections, but with the assurance of successful launching of new projects or inventions, either for employers or independently. Promotion and honors are in store, but sign all writings cautiously and be circumspect in personal associations.

A child born on this day should be clever, original, inventive and adventurous, and should attain established place either in enjoyment, with the public or on its own account.

Fay King Clears Up a Few Unfair Opinions Regarding Blondes and Brunettes

By FAY KING

Some thoughtless persons persist in speaking of all blondes as wild, and all brunettes as wise.

To them every blonde is "dizzy" and every brunette is "nice."

Though I am a brunette myself, no blonde could resent this more than I do.

For it happens that I have known many blondes with brains and ability.

And, alas, I have also known many brunettes who were very, very foolish.

Any number of successful men do not hesitate to give all credit to their pretty, golden-haired wives, who have contributed so much to their success.

And also we can point to careers which have been upset by the frivolity and extravagance of sensible-looking brunette wives.

Madge and Dicky Plan to Spike Veritzen's Scheme

Only a wife whose husband is tempestuous as well as temperamental can realize how relieved I was at Dicky's pettish little outburst about my circumlocution in telling him the story of Mr. Veritzen's espionage on Mary. I had been so afraid that my presence at my employer's little dinner party would call forth one of his old nerve-racking jealous rages, that I could not feel even a twinge of annoyance at the strictures which otherwise would have irritated me to resentful retort.

I even managed a light little laugh as he finished his tirade with the demand that I "begin again and tell the story without any trimmings."

"Sorry! Sorry!" I said half mockingly. "I should have respected your prejudices. Here is what Harry would call 'the dope.'"

Briefly, simply, I outlined the disturbing events of our journey to Robert Savarin's home in the Catskills, and our return therefrom. I began with Harry Underwood's discovery that a private detective in a black coupe was trailing us, told of the clever manner in which Mr. Underwood had thrown him off our track, and of the telephone calls to the farmhouse which had resulted in the man's learning our objective.

"Well! I'll be fried," Dicky ejaculated. "I knew about those calls and helped give him the dope."

"It was accurate," I returned, smiling, "for he came to the Hasbroucks not very long after we arrived."

I hurried on with the tale and told of our discovery at Englewood that the detective was apparently reporting his progress or lack of it to Mr. Veritzen.

"The old son of a sea cook!" Dicky growled when I had finished. "If he weren't half crazy on this subject of Noel and Mary, I'd give him the thrashing he's been needing for the last century or two, even if he is old enough to be my grandfather."

Dicky was looking at the road before him so I was able to conceal the smile which the last part of his diatribe had called forth. If the great dramatic producer had married in his teens, he might have had a son as old as Dicky. But I have noticed that Dicky always emphasizes the advanced age of any older man whom he jealously dislikes, either on his own account or that of a friend. He always, for instance, has referred to Robert Savarin as an "archaic old dodo," because he has resented, on Harry Underwood's account, the famous artist's devotion to Lillian.

"I think that's the answer to the whole question." I said quickly, putting an especial overtone of seriousness into my voice. "Lillian and Harry agree with me that he isn't quite sane on the subject of Noel's betrothal to Mary."

"Sane or insane, he has a colossal crust objecting to a beautiful and lovable girl like Mary."

"I don't think he objects to Mary himself, at all," I said. "Indeed, I think he would be really fond of her if he let himself follow his own instincts. But he is so obsessed with the idea that Noel might have married a princess of Transvania if it had not been for Mary, that he's nursing his anger and his determination to prevent their marriage."

"I fancy you're right," Dicky commented, his anger patently lessening. "But that doesn't make him any the less dangerous. Of course, it's easy to see what he's up to. He's trying to catch Mary in some trick like that masked dancer escapade—he has a long and vindictive memory that lad—and if he can't, he'll—by the Lord Harry!" He took one hand from the wheel and gave mine an approving little pat. "That's what you were spiking this evening. I wondered why you made so strong a spiel about never letting Mary appear without you, Lillian, or Katherine. You've got an apology coming to you from me. I thought you were simply putting on dog to impress the young talkie star."

"I think I impressed him, all right," I retorted laughing, "but not favorably."

"But you didn't notice him easing out, though," Dicky said. "Mr. Colin Cameron will be there with bells on when you throw your party for Mary."

"I know it, but that's because Mr. Veritzen will insist upon his coming whether he wants to or not," I answered.

"By Jove, that's it!" Dicky's voice held conviction. "You are the original little Sherlockia, and I've got to slip it to you. This Cameron is either under some obligation to Veritzen, or wants something of him bad enough so he's willing to dance for his supper. He'll probably stage a heavy devotion to Mary, and do his level best to cut Noel out, while Papa looks on from the wings, grinning like a satyr."

"That's what I think." My voice was despondent. "And Noel is in just the mood to make himself and Mary terribly unhappy. Oh! I wish Phil Veritzen——"

I stopped, and Dicky slowed the car to a mere crawl.

"Well! out with it," he said tensely. "What do you wish about Veritzen?"

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Hospitality and the Bride's New Home

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please tell me who is correct, if either, in the following matter of etiquette?

A claims that if a couple have a wedding reception with a catered breakfast or luncheon, that there is no further need of entertaining people who give wedding gifts, unless they wish to. Of course, the note of thanks would be sent to all. In the case of a private wedding with no guests, however, the bride must entertain all givers of gifts as soon as possible after the wedding.

B claims that no matter how big a reception or how elaborate, every person who gives a gift, either engagement or wedding, must be entertained in the bride's home. V. T.

There isn't any 'rule" of this kind, of either kind as a matter of fact, in the world of etiquette. The invitation to the reception or the being "entertained" at the reception, has nothing to do with giving of presents by the guests. Or at least I could not imagine its being interpreted in this fashion. The bride and groom and their families invite to the wedding the friends whom they wish to have with them on this important day. And naturally they would invite people who "give gifts" since — also naturally — the friends of both families would wish to give gifts for the wedding.

Naturally, too, the couple would invite their friends later, to their new home. But it would not be—at least I hope that it would not be—because these friends have given wedding gifts or betrothal gifts. People who make their start in life together on such a commercial basis, rating their friends according to debit and credit, will make an unattractive and materialistic beginning. They should invite their friends to their home because they wish to have them with them, not because of any present obligation.

A Card in Better Taste

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Since last Christmas a friend of mine has been married. We were in the habit of giving each other presents each year, and I think now that he is married that it would be proper to give both him and his wife presents. Kindly tell me if this is proper, and what I should do.

KITTY.

It would be far better form for you not to send a Christmas present, but instead, to send a card to him and his wife. Be sure to address it to both!

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Students who find difficulty in concentrating on their studies should ask themselves questions. Are you getting sufficient sleep? Is the diet wholesome? Do they have enough exercise out of doors? Is the bedroom well ventilated? Is the intestinal tract active?

Tired eyes are comforted by hot applications followed by cold. At the first sign of inflammation apply a boric acid solution; dissolve a teaspoonful of powdered boric acid in a cupful of boiling water, cool and apply with an eyecup. Persistent eye strain foretells the fact that it is time to see old Mister Eye-doc and have an examination for specs.

Strange that more girls aren't interested in gym classes. Skipping round with the herd is fun. It is interesting, joyous play that makes one's lungs laugh, puts color in the cheeks, ginger in the step, brings restful sleep. Desk workers, especially, are benefited. Without exercise they are likely to get what is known as chair diseases, which aren't diseases at all, but spread of hips and haunches and sagging abdominal muscles.

Love of order stamps itself upon a woman, makes her trim-looking, makes her snappy That woman to whom order is the first law of grooming may stop to clean her finger nails when the house is on fire, but you'll never pick hairs from the shoulder of her frock, nor will she tag about showing a button that is attached by a safety-pin. No twisted seams in the rear of her socks, no run over heels, no gloves of uncertain complexion. She is as spic and span as if she had just jumped out of a bandbox.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Overeating a Usual Cause of Gout

In some form, gout is almost as common today in America as it used to be in England. It is due, not so much to excessive beef-eating as it is to overeating in general.

DR. COPELAND

As a matter of fact, any diet containing what scientists call "purines," may be harmful to a person who has a tendency to gout. The purines are chemical compounds found in the tissues of plants and animals.

Uric acid is an example. Caffeine present in tea and coffee, and theobromine found in tea and cocoa are other forms. Beef extract, liver, sweetbreads, brain and kidneys are rich in purines. Beef contains less than half as large a percentage of purines as liver.

Gout is a disease familiar to everybody. From the beginning of time jokes have been made about the poor victim of gout. But it is no laughing matter for the one who has the ailment. Certainly the pain and discomfort from gout are excuse enough for the bad disposition of a saint.

In the acute attack of gout the patient should be put to bed and kept quiet. The foot with the inflamed joint should be elevated and kept warm.

Simple diet, rest and quiet are the particular things which will give relief. A doctor should have oversight of the sufferer.

There are certain kidney troubles which are traced to gout. Skin and eye troubles are among its complications.

Certain mineral waters have long been considered useful. Electricity, light and heat, when rightfully employed, help a good deal. Strapping an inflamed joint with adhesive does much to ease the pain.

The victim should take warning from the least touch of gout. He should begin at once to avoid those foods which are too rich in purines. Milk and all milk products are good. Eggs, bread, cereals, fruits and vegetables make a foundation diet which contains no purines.

Temperance in all things is good for everybody. Temperance in eating and drinking is essential in gout. Alcohol should be omitted in all cases.

Overeating has been the curse of every age. One of the penalties of prosperity is the danger of indulging the palate. Moderate eating should be the rule for everybody.

It is not gout alone that follows excesses. All the organs and tissues of the body suffer. Good sense demands moderation.

Answers to Health Queries

Miss H. E. G. Q.—What causes a yellow complexion?

A.—This is indicative of a sluggish liver and faulty elimination. Correct the diet and be sure to take plenty of outdoor exercise.

S. C. Q.—What harm, if any, can be done by blistering the stomach or abdomen?

A.—Burns are always dangerous to kidneys if the trouble is extensive and they might become infected, to say nothing of the discomfort caused by blistering this delicate skin.

Coast's Edge on East.

Rockne's Newest Find.

TED COY STUDIES WEST'S ADVANTAGE

BY TAKING FOUR out of five games played with Southern California and beating Stanford in their only meeting with Pop Warner's athletes, the Notre Dame gridders have demonstrated that there is at least one team in the Middle West to which the Far West's claims of football superiority do not apply. But with the East it's a different story. What Southern California, Stanford, California, Washington State and Oregon State have done in recent years to Pitt, Carnegie Tech, Army, Dartmouth, Penn, Villanova and West Virginia indicates that the Pacific Coast still has a big edge on this part of the country.

Ted Coy

The latest opinion as to the reason for this is offered by E. H. (Ted) Coy, former star fullback at Yale. He believes it is due to a difference in coaching methods between the larger Eastern and Far Western colleges and universities, with a decided margin in favor of the Pacific Coast schools. Coy, who made Walter Camp's all-America team in 1908 and 1909 after being named on the second eleven in 1907, and who is the choice of most experts for fullback in all-time selections, for the present is making his home in Greensburg, where he is engaged in business. He recently returned from the West Coast after spending several years there.

COY CONTENDS THAT in the Eastern half of the United States there are several coaching systems which are followed by the majority of schools. These systems may be altered, but slightly, and are fundamentally the same, he says. In the West, on the other hand, according to Ted, each of the larger colleges has its own particular individual style. California, Southern California and Stanford use systems that are altogether different from one another, Coy reports. Thus the scouting so prevalent among Eastern institutions means little or nothing on the coast.

The former Yale star also expresses the opinion that the West has much better football material than the East, which is another reason for coast successes in intersectional games. The superiority in man-power, he says, lies in the fact that the entrance requirements at the larger Western universities are less stringent than in the Atlantic coast region. Coy scoffs at the idea that the sudden change in climate an Eastern team must experience in traveling to the Pacific slope wreaks havoc among the players.

SEEKING TO BOLSTER its catching department by the addition of an experienced man, the Pittsburgh club has put in a claim for every worth-while backstop in the majors on whom waivers were asked. Always to no avail, however. The other club promptly withdrew the waiver request and kept the receiver.

Val Picinich

If the Buc bosses have entertained any hopes of getting Val Picinich, it develops there will be no chance in that direction, either. The Brooklyn club announces that it has abandoned the idea of bringing some other old catcher back from the minors and decided that it can do better by retaining Picinich, who was slated to go out until the Robin management sensed it could not get him past the Pirate guards at the exits. So Picinich will stay in Brooklyn to share with Paul Richards, a Macon recruit, the little catching work that Alfonso Lopez does not perform.

ONE OF PITT'S greatest athletes of all time, particularly in football, though a letter man in baseball as well, passed yesterday in the death of Chalky Williamson, Panther quarterback in 1913-14-15 (the first two seasons under Coach Joe Duff and the other under Pop Warner) and captain of the eleven in his final year. Williamson was rated by many the greatest quarterback that Pitt ever had. He never had an equal in Blue and Gold gridiron history as a kicker, and his rare ability in other branches of play, together with his field generalship and fighting spirit, made him the standard by which all Panther quarterbacks since have been appraised.

A PLAYER HAD to be great merely to become a Pitt regular in Williamson's day, as on the Panther teams at that time were some of the most brilliant players ever developed here. Among the backs who played with Chalky at one time or another during his three seasons were George McLaren, Andy Hastings, Jimmy DeHart and Jim Merrow, and at the end were such stars as Hube Wagner, Pat Herron and Cliff Carlson.

Noted teammates of Williamson in the line from time to time were Jock Sutherland, Claude Thornhill, Bob Peck, Dale Sies, Polly Galvin, Carl Hockensmith and R. K. Soppitt. There could be no stronger attest of Chalky's exceptional ability as a player than the fact that he was a standout in that brilliant company.

CHALKY WAS MORE than a great football player. He was even bigger off the field than on it, a man of the highest and cleanest type, and a credit to his alma mater, whose death is mourned by every one of his countless friends as a personal loss.

Charley Jaskwich

Williamson was the fourth prominent Pitt football figure to die within a year, death having also claimed in that time Alex Stevenson, Leo Murphy and Dr. Charles B. Quailey.

THE NOTRE DAME players who will be lost to the team before another football season arrives are Frank Carideo, quarterback; Marty Brill and Buck O'Connor, halfbacks; Moon Mullins, fullback; Tom Conley, Johnny O'Brien, George Vlk and Jack Carberry, ends; Tom Kassis and Norwin Herwit, guards, and Frank Leshy and Dick Donoghue, tackles. One of Coach Knute Rockne's hardest jobs will be to replace Carideo, all-America quarterback, who will graduate in the spring and who is reported likely to coach at Princeton or Canisius next fall. The player first in line for the place would appear to be Charley Jaskwich, of Kenosha, Wis., sophomore understudy of Carideo this year, but according to rumor his selection is by no means certain. All because Rockne, as usual, is said to have another sensation in waiting. The latest is Laurie Vejar, from right out of Southern California's backyard. He played at Hollywood High School and is said to be an able quarterback in every respect and a great ball-carrying prospect in addition.

INTERNATIONAL LEAGUE HOCKEY games in Cleveland have not been drawing so well, and in an endeavor to fatten the gates the management of the club has decided to make a sweeping change in the home schedule. The fact that the Pittsburgh team outdrew previous attractions in playing there last Saturday night gave the Cleveland people an idea.

Accordingly all games scheduled for mid-week dates in Cleveland during the remainder of the season will be moved back to Saturday nights, when, it is expected, they will draw larger crowds. There are seven of these games on the list, but only one change will affect the schedule of the Pittsburgh club, that being the transfer to a Saturday date of the tilt in which the Yellow Jackets were originally scheduled to appear on Tuesday, March 3.

IF DONIE BUSH, White Sox skipper, consummates this week or later the deal he is reported to have on the fire for the transfer of Third Baseman Willie Kamm to another American League club, the trade may involve one of the most popular baseball products of this district in the person of Bill Regan, of Brookline.

LOCALS OBTAIN LEO REISE; STARS HURT

By CARL W. SHATTO

Two fast-traveling clubs will be opposed tonight when the local Yellow Jackets meet the Syracuse Stars in an International Hockey League game at Duquesne Garden. After getting away to slow starts, both the Jackets and the Stars have advanced with a rush. The local icemen have suffered only one reversal in their last five battles, and Syracuse has taken the measure of Windsor and Detroit in its last two frays.

Leo Reise

The Stars are the only skaters in the circuit who have not yet appeared here. They defeated the Schooley puckmen, 3-1, at Syracuse in the third game of the campaign, but both clubs have made wholesale lineup changes since that time.

And more changes will be in evidence tonight, one as a result of a deal put through yesterday by Roy D. Schooley, president and manager, and others as a result of injuries to local stars.

YANKOSKI TRADED

Steve Yankoski, defense man who appeared in only three games, was traded yesterday to London for Leo Reise, big guard who for many years was one of the mainstays of the New York Americans. Leo, who gave a fine exhibition when he played with London here early in the season, arrived here this morning, and will provide relief for Art Berlett at right defense tonight.

Berlett suffered a severe leg injury in the Cleveland game here last Thursday night, and Duke McCurry suffered a broken rib in the same wild battle. Although not able to play in Cleveland Saturday, big Art is sufficiently recovered to start tonight. McCurry did not discover the seriousness of his injury until late yesterday. The titan-haired fighter played in Cleveland Saturday, broken rib and all, and starred in the joust. He will be out of the lineup for about three weeks.

Mickey McGuire is another Jacket casualty. He sustained a split ankle in the game at Windsor last Wednesday, played about two minutes against Cleveland here Thursday and one period at Cleveland Saturday. In that single period he scored two goals. He is well on the way to recovery today, and contemplates giving the Syracuse defense plenty of trouble.

NEW MEN GET CHANCE

Tonight's fray will be a "make or break" game for Red Moore, who is to provide relief for Gordy Fraser at left defense; Eddie Bouchard, who is to skate at left wing on the third front line, and Paddy Sullivan, who is to be at center on the same line. Schooley is eager to learn just how much hockey these boys can produce, and unless they show well "passports" probably will be in order.

In attempting to score the locals will be firing at Goalie Bud Fisher, who started the season in the local nets and who was sent to Syracuse about a week ago.

Rusty Hughes, defense man obtained from Detroit, and Pete Pelango and Lloyd Klein, former National League wingman, are Syracuse newcomers who have given the Stars a real punch. Pelango is a former Canadien and Klein is a former Boston Bruin.

Tonight's game will mark the Jackets' last home appearance until December 19. Despite the fact that they are sharing the cellar position, the locals and Stars are only two games out of second place. What a race! The probable lineup:

PITTSBURGH	POS.	SYRACUSE
Cox	G.	Fisher
Fraser	L. D.	Fournier
Berlett	R. D.	Hughes
Fields	C.	Holmes
Proudlock	L. W.	Markle
Gregg	R. W.	Lauder

DARRAGH TRADED

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 9.—(AP.)—The Philadelphia Quakers, of the National Hockey League, have traded Harold Darragh, veteran wing, to the Boston Bruins for George Hutton, a wing, and Peaches Lyons, a defense player.

Herrera to Box Petrolle In New York

CONROY SWIM MEET VICTOR

More than 100 ambitious young swimmers from a dozen schools from the North and South Side districts of the city invaded Forbes School yesterday afternoon to strive for individual and school honors in the first of two sectional championship meets held under the auspices of the Department of Hygiene of the Pittsburgh Public Schools. What many of these kiddies lacked in swimming technique and ability they made up in enthusiasm earnestness.

Five of the 12 schools figured in the scoring, with Conroy and McNaugher fighting all the way for high honors. Conroy's 28 points were just a point and a half to much for McNaugher, which garnered 22½, Beltzhoover, Brookline, and Troy Hill trailed with 10½, 5 and 3 respectively. The summary:

Event No. 1—Breast stroke, one length—Won by Barting, of Conroy; time 12 3-5 seconds; Baun, McNaugher, second; Kubelich, Beltzhoover, third; Horst, Brookline, fourth.

Event No. 2—Free style, two length of pool—Won by Merz, of Conroy; time, 23 seconds; Schellhaas, Conroy, second; Berger, Troy Hill, third; Ryan, Beltzhoover, fourth.

Event No. 3—Back stroke, one length—Won by Anderson, of McNaugher; time, 14 2-5 seconds; Kalchthaler, Beltzhoover, second; Donaldson, McNaugher, third; Sobehart, Troy Hill, fourth.

Event No. 4—Diving, plain front, plain back, front jack knife—Won by Blake, of Conroy, 58 points; Hammon, Conroy, second, 51 points; Kalchthaler, Beltzhoover, third, 47 points; Johnson, McNaugher, fourth, 47 points.

Event No. 5—Relay race—Won by McNaugher (Hinds Johnson, Arnold Wright); time, 1:47; second, Conroy (Foley, Stranahan, Linchosky, Hammon); third, Brookline (Hutson, Myers Cullison, Bowser); fourth, Beltzhoover (Patrino, McClure, Grelle, Martin).

PITT MOURNS WILLIAMSON

By JESS CARVER.

Alumni, officials and undergraduates of the University of Pittsburgh today are mourning deeply the passing of one of the most brilliant gridiron performers in the history of the institution, Guy Mowrey (Chalky) Williamson, 40, quarterback on the Pitt elevens of '13, '14 and 15, died yesterday in the Presbyterian Hospital, where he had been confined for the past 10 days.

Williamson

Of slender, almost frail build from early boyhood, and never in the best of health, Williamson called the courage and fire of a fighting heart to his aid, and fought his way to the very top of football pinnacle. He was a star from the first moment he donned moleskins, and was accounted the best punter in the school's history.

Williamson enrolled at Pitt in the fall of 1913, after having spent a year at Purdue University and at DePauw. He prepped at New Mexico Military Institute, at Roswell, N. M., where he attracted attention as a quarterback. A classmate, James Hamilton, son of A. R. Hamilton, a power in Pitt athletics until his death four years ago, was instrumental in persuading Williamson to matriculate at Pitt.

CAPTAIN IN 1915

After serving in a stellar role for two years, Williamson was elected captain of the Panther team in 1915, Pop Warner's first year as head coach. For five weeks in 1914 Chalky was in the hospital with a severely injured leg. He returned to the team two days before the Penn State game, and almost single handed defeated State, turning in two long runs and kicking the goal after touchdown that brought a Pitt triumph.

Upon graduating from Pitt, Williamson enlisted in the Naval Air Service, and served as an instructor in bombing. He held the rank of a first lieutenant when he resigned from the service in 1919.

Leaving the Marines, he went to South America, where he was engaged in engineering work for oil companies for two years. Returning to the United States, he went to Grove City College as head coach, serving there for three years and then returning to his alma mater as assistant varsity

COMMITTEES CARD CONFAB TOMORROW

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—(AP.)—Major league club owners spent the first day of the annual midwinter meetings in high-powered conversation.

When all was said and done yesterday, it took the time-worn draft question to provide the only excitement of the day.

The committee of nine appointed by the three class AA non-draft leagues—American Association, International and Pacific Coast Leagues—announced they had been invited to confer on the draft question with a committee representing the National and American leagues at the Hotel Roosevelt tomorrow morning.

Efforts to hold an informal conference between the opposing groups yesterday failed when the major leagues failed to gather a quorum. The majors have discontinued all business dealings with the five non-draft leagues, the three class AA circuits and the Western and three Eye leagues until they accept the draft. This the non-draft organizations are prepared to do but the rival groups have been unable to agree on terms. They may do so at tomorrow's conference or later in the week, but baseball men generally were of the opinion that a settlement of the dispute was only a question of time.

There were indications that the Chicago Cubs soon would dispose of their franchise at Reading, Pa., in the International League. The Cubs announced at Montreal that the Reading franchise was on the market and yesterday, at an International League meeting, it was announced that a "prospective buyer" was under consideration and that the matter probably would be settled definitely tomorrow. There was no intimation as to who the prospective buyer was.

Many players in the majors were reported on the market, as the magnates prepared to open their annual confab. Among them was Gus Suhr, Pirate first baseman. Others mentioned in possible deals were Heathcote, Osborn and Grimm, of the Cubs; Hendrick, Flowers, Slade and Picinich, of the Robins; Whitney, of the Phillies; Roush, Genewich, Fullis and Pruett, of the Giants; Bottomley, Orsatti, Rhem and Haines, of the Cardinals; Brandt and Sisler, of the Braves, and Stripp, Benton, Meusel and Heilman, of the Reds.

Another important question to be taken up by the magnates was a plan to adopt a zoning system to cut down the number of cheap home runs.

ARMY-NAVY PREPARE FOR CHARITY BATTLE

SASSE EXPECTS MIDDIES TO BE TOUGH

WEST POINT, Dec. 9.—(AP.)—Launching practice in preparation for the big charity game with the Navy in New York on Saturday, Maj. Ralph I. Sasse, Army football coach, yesterday sounded a warning that "the Navy is 100 per cent better than at any previous time this season."

"Bill Ingram has developed a smooth running attack which is perfectly co-ordinated," said Sasse, who saw the Middshipmen in their decisive victory over Penn on Saturday. "It is obvious that the team has found itself.

"On the defense the Navy was alert and strong. Another phase of the game which they have mastered is blocking and tackling. The interference took out its men perfectly, showing fine teamwork, and the tackling was day will be severe foil."

MIDDIES TAKE IT EASY

ANNAPOLIS, Dec. 9.—(AP.)—Coach Navy Bill Ingram, believing the three weeks' comparative rest which his regulars had before the Pennsylvania game last Saturday did them more good than a rough-and-tumble preparation program, yesterday started to prepare for the charity game with the Army in New York on Saturday with a light workout.

Ingram believes his regulars have reached the peak of their strength, having recovered from the battering received in five hard games in a row in mid-season with little replacement material to rest his varsity. Just enough work to keep the tars in shape was the program at the Academy for the three weeks prior to the Pennsylvania game, which Navy won, 26 to 0.

TICKET SALES GROW

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—(AP.)—Ticket sales for the benefit football game between the Army and Navy at the Yankee Stadium Saturday had passed the $600,000 mark today and it still was hoped the receipts would reach or exceed $1,000,000.

DUKES DINE TONIGHT

The open season for digestive systems is on. If your digestion isn't ruined by the time the present football banqueting season is over and done, don't blame it on anyone but yourself.

Lou Little

Tonight, at the William Penn Hotel, the Duquesne University Alumni body fires what practically is the opening gun as it honors the Duke grid varsity with what promises to be a rousing affair. After this one, the high schools will swing into line with fetes almost every evening. Thursday the Pittsburgh Chapter of the Eastern Intercollegiate Football Referees' Association dines at the Keystone A. C. and the C. of C.'s affair for the city champions, Pitt, and the annual Pitt banquet are in the offing.

Lou Little, head coach at Columbia University, former chief mentor at Georgetown, is in town today as the guest of the Duke Alumni and will deliver himself of the principal address at tonight's affair. Little is a fine speaker, and is one of the top-notch coaches of the nation.

As a feature of the proceedings, the varsity letter winners will elect a captain for 1931.

BOXING CARDS ARE SHAPED

The boxing program for the weekly show in the Moose Temple, Friday night, has been completed and only the opening bout remains to be signed for the McKeesport program, Thursday night.

Promoter Apples Meyers, of the Moose, filled out his bill when he paired off Paul Balint, of the North Side, and Gus Britner, of Charleroi, protege of Eddie Pinchot, for the second bout and Joe Perry, of Carnegie, brother of Jack Perry, former leading local welterweight, with Richard Greene, Homestead Negro, for the opener.

Teddy Welsh, of McKeesport, has been signed with Al Munro, Negro, of the Hill, for the second bout at McKeesport. Frank Novak and Nick Perlick, heavies, meet in the main bout and Johnny Warner, of Clairton, and Joe Dragon, of Cincinnati, are in the other 10-rounder, making up a double windup offering.

Patsy Brannigan and Tommy Phillips put on their second amateur show in Columbus Hall, North Side, tonight. They have arranged the following card of six bouts: Paul Monar vs. Joe (Red) Duffy, in the main event, and William Zurick vs. Ray Windbush, Jimmy Busish vs. Art Arnold, Pete Mangone vs. Johnny King, Johnny Shepler vs. Billy Wilson and Young Pace vs. Sam Esbirn.

HOT BATTLE AT GARDEN

ANDERSON KNOCKED OFF BALANCE IN SEVENTH

HERRERA BEATS ANDERSON IN THRILLER

By HARRY KECK,
Sports Editor.

Cowboy Eddie Anderson, of Wyoming, lived up to his reputation of being one of the best showmen in the ring in his 10-round main bout before another packed house at Motor Square Garden last night. Taking a pasting round after round, the veteran flashed and spurted at psychological moments in each with such spectacular effect that at the finish he had the crowd with him, booing the referee's decision in favor of Herrera. The judges disagreed, Frank Ferris voting for Anderson and Frank Brown for Herrera. The referee was Al Grayber.

Anderson gave Herrera the toughest fight the Mexican star ever has had here. He has a weaving, bobbing style and a sidelong stance that made Tony miss many, many leads, while, with his low-held arms, he blocked a number of Tony's best-intentioned hooks and swings for the body. With his superb ring generalship, he weathered crashing right-handers and left hooks to the jaw and always came back with a furious rally just when Tony appeared finally to have the fight under control.

MAKES FAST FINISH

Anderson reserved his supreme flashes for the last two rounds. The ninth found Tony resting up until the closing moments, and, when he tried to cut loose for a fast finish in the tenth, he found Anderson willingly fighting toe to toe with him. A blow hurt Tony and forced him to hang on and he had to come back strong to even up the round.

This closing round saw both smeared with their own blood in the furious fighting. Tony's came from the old cut on the right side of his head that has been opened several times in bouts here. It began to trickle at the end of the fifth round. Anderson's left eye bled from the third round on and in several of the rounds he had to brush the crimson fluid away with his glove so he could see properly. The entire right side of Anderson's face was badly bruised.

There were no knockdowns in the bout. The nearest approach was when Tony partially sent Anderson to the canvas with a corking straight right to the chin at the start of the seventh round only to have the gritty Anderson come back fighting and weather continued hard punching during the frame.

Anderson started the fight with a rush and won the first round, his only one of the bout, by his forcing tactics and swinging right-handers, which caused Herrera to break ground. Aside from the even split in the final round, all of the others belonged to Herrera by varying margins, but the battle was intensely hard fought and interesting in every heat. Tony was warned several times to keep his left hooks above the belt and once for butting in the close-range fighting. He was hit on the belt line himself late in the bout.

DUNN WHIPS RONAN

Johnny Dunn, of New Kensington, 130½, gave Homer Ronan, of Newark, O., 129½, a neat boxing lesson in the eight-round semi-final, flooring him for a nine count in the sixth round. Ronan, who fought under the handicap of a cut eye from the second round on, was outclassed from the start.

Joey Speigle, of Uniontown, 141½, national junior amateur lightweight champion, failed to impress in his professional debut against Bobby Barnes, Negro, of Homewood, 136, in the six-round second bout, but he won every round with his southpaw battling and hard hitting with his left hand, only to have a three-way decision served up, culminating in a draw by the referee, Judge Brown voted for Speigle and Judge Ferris for Barnes. Speigle was down for a count of two in the first round and for no count in the sixth, but was not hurt on either occasion. He had boxed Barnes previously in the amateur ranks.

KETCHEL KNOCKED OUT

Walter Ketchel, of the East End, 165, who did some good fighting around here last season, was a total loss against Sunny Jim McVey, Negro, of Rankin, 168, and took the easy way out under a right to the jaw at the start of the second round, being counted out. He was punched out on his feet throughout the first round and at no time in the bout made an effort to fight back, acting as if he were in a daze before the bout even got under way.

Red Robinson alternated as referee with Grayber. A. C. Couch and Norman Borland were the timers and Harry Klaas did the announcing. The George Panka-K. O. Christner bout was announced as the headliner of the benefit show for the unemployed next week. Jimmy Thomas, of the Hill, will box Mickey Cohen, of Cleveland, in the second bout and Sammy O'Dell, of Akron, and Johnny Smackey, of Canonsburg, who boxed a semi-final at the Meyers Bowl last summer, will be in the opener. Ted Yarosz, undefeated welterweight, of Monaca, may be one of the principals in the eight-round semi-final.

BENEFIT BOUTS BILLED

The H. T. Little Club, of Homestead, will stage its second amateur boxing show for the relief of the needy of the district in Turner Hall, Homestead, Tuesday night of next week. Ten bouts are planned. The first show, held on the night of Armistice Day, netted $450.

cans since the latter part of the 1926 season is said to have been offered in exchange for Kamm by Shano Collins, the new manager of the Red Sox. Whether it will go through or not is a question, however, as three other players have been rumored as possibilities in a trade for Kamm—Lew Fonseca, of the Indians; Jimmy Dykes, of the A's, and Lyn Lary, of the Yankees.

Bill Regan

THE GENERAL OPINION among American League men is that Regan would be more valuable to any other club in the circuit than he is to the Red Sox, for the reason that he believes he is jinxed in batting at Fenway Park in Boston, where he must play 50 per cent of his games each year, and cannot get his best possible results there. Bill's best mark there was .288, made in 1929. This year he fell to .266. He always hits much better on the road than at home, and American League managers and players are of the opinion that he would be able to do far better work for another club. The explanation given for Bush's decision to play Kamm is that Willie's nose is slightly out of joint in Chicago. He was captain of the White Sox in 1929, but was not reappointed this year and was dissatisfied in consequence, according to report. It has also been rumored that Kamm thought the managership of the club should have been offered to him instead of to Bush when Len Blackburne was deposed.

PITT MOURNS WILLIAMSON

coach under Dr. John B. Sutherland.

In 1926, he gave up coaching and was engaged in promotion and publicity workout throughout the United States for three years. Last year, he was engaged as head coach of football at Kiski School, but his health, which had been failing at an alarming rate for the past five years, became so poor that he was forced to give up his duties almost as soon as he entered into them.

Inaddition to his football playing at Pitt, Williamson was a pitcher and star second baseman on the baseball team, earning a varsity letter each of the three years he spent at Pitt. The Pittsburgh Pirates twice gave him tryouts as a pitcher after he left school.

PLAYED AT PURDUE

Born in Pendleton, Indiana, in 1890, Williamson first enrolled at Purdue University, but he was considered too light and frail for varsity football and was removed from the squad. The first hint of failing health followed, and he went to New Mexico, where he enrolled in the military school and began his climb to football fame.

Williamson was a member of the Phi Gamma Delta national social fraternity; O. D. K., national honorary society; Bellefield Lodge No. 680, F. & A. M. of the A. A. S. R.; Syria Temple A. A. O. N. M. S.; Pittsburgh City Post No. 59 of the American Legion and of the University Club of Pittsburgh.

He is survived by his bride of last June, Mrs. Charlotte P. Williamson, and his mother, Mrs. W. E. Williamson, house chaperon of the University of Pittsburgh chapter of Phi Gamma Delta.

Dr. John B. Sutherland, head coach at Pitt and a teammate of the former star when he was at his height, was deeply grieved at the death of the former star.

"Chalky was a fine chap, one of the best I have ever known," Sutherland said yesterday. "I knew he was very low, but, as all visitors were denied him, I was unable to see him in his last illness. Pitt has lost a great son, and football an outstanding figure."

FUNERAL ON THURSDAY

K. E. Davis, former graduate manager of athletics at Pitt, and present alumni secretary and athletic manager at Western Reserve, when informed of the death of the former star, expressed himself as being deeply grieved. Davis and Williamson were close personal friends.

Funeral services will be held Thursday afternoon at 2:30 at Sampson's Funeral Home, Neville avenue. Services will be private.

The Elwood City Club, one of the new members of the Allegheny County League, makes its first appearance of the season in the Greater Pittsburgh district tonight when Nate Lippe and his supporting cast opposes the Fintex team at Columbus Temple in one of the two league games on the schedule. In the other fray the Glassport Club is the attraction of the Duquesne Lafayettes league champs, on the Duquesne Library floor.

The Elwood City Club, including on its roster Lippe, Delahunty and Friedman, all former Tri-State Conference stars, shapes up as one of the strongest teams in the County League this season and, judging from its showing to date, it stands a good chance of displacing the Lafayettes as champions.

EAGER TO WIN

Fintex, having split even in its first two games, winning from Charleroi and losing to the Mieles, realizes it must win tonight to stay in the running for the title. Fintex has been pointing for this game for the last two weeks and will take the floor with every regular in shape.

Carl (Moon) Klinsing, popular local professional star, who recently signed a contract with Fintex, will not be eligible to play tonight, but will be available Thursday night when Fintex meets the Y. M. H. A. on the latter's floor in a non-league contest. Arrangements for the game were completed last night by Wy Paris, of Fintex, and Arthur Scher, of the Y. M. H. A. This game is the first of a series of high-class attractions to be presented by the Y. M. H. A. athletic authorities.

Only one game is scheduled in the West Penn League tonight, the North Side Buicks being the attraction of the Knickerbockers.

FALCONS COP

The South Side Falcons took over North Side Community, 37 to 28, in their West Penn League contest, while I. K. S. defeated Trinity Cathedral, 37 to 30, in a Wagner Institutional League battle last night.

The Lou Littles won from Phi Alpha Beta, 20-13; the Chesters walloped Phi Omega Theta, 46-9, in the Y. M. H. A. Intramural League, and Trinity Cathedral Royals defeated Monessen Trinity at Monessen, 21-20.

Basketball Rules Quiz

PLAY NO. 8.

In a game between St. Louis University and Texas, Plunkert, of St. Louis, is awarded the ball, to be put into play from out-of-bounds. Elkins, of Texas, slaps the ball from Plunkert's hands and runs to cover his man.

What is the correct ruling?

ANSWER.

A technical foul is charged against Elkins and Plunkert is given a free throw. An opponent is not allowed to so much as touch the ball in interfering with a player who has been awarded it to be returned to the court from out-of-bounds. This is an infraction of the rules frequently overlooked by officials.

SOCCER LEAGUE MEETS

W. VA., PENN STATE RENEW GRID RELATIONS

LIONS TO PLAY MOUNTAINEERS NEXT YEAR

MORGANTOWN, Dec. 9.—Renewal of football relations between Penn State and West Virginia was announced here this morning, with the statement that the institutions had agreed to play here on November 21, 1931. In order to make the shift possible, the West Virginia game with Washington and Jefferson College, a 40-year-old fixture on the Mountaineer card, will be transferred to Wheeling, and will be played there on the Saturday after Thanksgiving, according to an agreement made several days ago between these two institutions, thus permitting the Penn State game to climax the Mountaineers' home schedule.

Penn State was last played by the Mountaineers at football in 1924, when they dedicated Mountaineer Field, the new stadium here, and were also played in New York, to a 13-13 tie, in 1923.

NEALE REAFFIRMED

The West Virginia University athletic board, with all members present, last night reaffirmed its action of last week in accepting the resignation of Ira Rodgers as head football coach and in recommending Earle (Greasy) Neale as Rodgers' successor. At the meeting last week, one member was absent.

Rodgers was accorded a great ovation last night by the players after he completed his remarks at the annual Mountaineer banquet. He praised the coaching ability of Neale, former mentor at such institutions as the University of Virginia, Washington and Jefferson, Marietta and West Virginia Wesleyan, as well as a former major league baseball player. Appointment of a 1931 football captain was deferred until after spring practice.

MANAGERS NAMED

Football, student manager, Fiske S. Hicks, Parkersburg; assistants, Nel Bolton, Bellington; Charles R. Bush, Grafton; John R. Morris, Clarksburg, and Edwin S. Fitcher, Charleston.

SUSCE STARS FOR BLUES

By CHARLES J. DOYLE.

George Susce, of Oakland, former Schenley High School baseball star, who was sent to Kansas City in the American Association by the Phillies this year after being injured in the spring, performed at a clip that indicates he will eventually be back in the big show. In addition to catching fine ball for the Blues, Susce finished among the .300 hitters, with an average of .304, it is disclosed by the official American Association averages. In 45 games, he made 38 hits for a total of 48 bases, his safeties including five doubles, a triple and a home run, and in addition he made four sacrifice hits and stole four bases.

Clyde Barthart, former Pirate, still holds his place among the .300 stickers. He hit .307 in 123 games for Indianapolis and knocked in 71 runs.

Elmer Yoter, local product, had another good year. Playing for Minneapolis at the start and Columbus later, he finished with an average of .317 and ranked well up toward the front in stolen bases with 24. Lute Boone, former Glenwood citizen, batted .295 for Columbus.

Bob Fenner, of St. Paul, who played in 98 games, led the regular players of the association in batting with a mark of .391, followed by Charley High, of Minneapolis, with .382 for 104 ames, and Dewitt Lebourveau, of Toledo, with .380 for 138 games. Joe Kuhel, Washington's new first baseman, hit .372 for Kansas City, and Nick Cullop, now with the Reds, batted .359 for Minneapolis, in addition to leading the league in home runs with the big total of 54.

An unusual feature of the 1930 season was that every one of the eight clubs in the association made a team batting average of .300 or better, Toledo leading with .315.

STOCKS START CLIMB AFTER EARLY DIP

Industrial Shares Lead In Advance Which Cuts Losses; Some Show Gains

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—(AP.)—The stock market dropped anchor today, after drifting quietly lower for five sessions.

There was further selling during the morning, depressing some of the rails and specialties to new lows, but the industrial shares, which have resisted selling pressure of late, soon began to work higher. Early declines of 1 to 3 points were reduced, and several prominent issues sold up a point or two.

The strong support accorded the industrial shares as their general level approached the year's low point recorded on November 10, was regarded as distinctly encouraging. The rails, as measured by the price index of 20 issues, broke through their November bottom yesterday and recorded the lowest level since May, 1926. Had the industrials also been permitted to break into new low territory, it would, according to the Dow theory, have "confirmed" the decline in the rails, and indicated a further downward movement.

Strength of the steel shares was presumably a reflection of forecasts that United States Steel's unfilled orders, to be announced tomorrow, will show a fair gain.

The improved statistical position of the tire industry was reflected in announcements of increased manufacturing activity at both Goodyear and Firestone plants. Wall street was inclined to regard the latest estimate of November automobile output, at 124,000 units, the lowest in years, as unduly conservative, and expects a little higher total will be shown when the final figures appear.

The Treasury Department's figures as to money in circulation at the end of November, amounting to $37.59 per capita, an increase of $1.29 during the month, was interesting as reflecting the normal increase in money requirements as the holidays approach. Credit conditions were virtually unchanged. Call loans held steady at 2 per cent, although early in the day there were limited outside offerings at 1½ per cent.

CRUDE OUTPUT TAKES DROP

TULSA, Okla., Dec. 9.—(AP.)—Daily average crude oil production in the United States took another sharp tumble last week, dropping to 2,226,936 barrels, the lowest level since the week ended August 28, 1926, according to the Oil and Gas Journal in its weekly report. The decrease was 40,469 barrels.

Oklahoma led in the downward movement with a decline of 34,890 barrels, which placed the state's output at 451,520.

California production totaled 598,500 barrels, a decrease of 3,500.

Forbes Urges Rubber Trade to Co-operate

—By B. C. FORBES—

Mr. Forbes

AKRON, Dec. 9.—Akron, this city of a quarter million population, is even more emphatically the rubber manufacturing center of the world than Detroit is the world's automobile center. Both cities owe their prominence to men rather than to unique geographical or other natural advantages. If Dr. Goodrich, the founder of the first tiny rubber factory here, had gone to some other city, Akron doubtless would not today be the rubber capital of the United States.

'Tis men who make or unmake a community, city, state, nation.

An invitation to talk to the heads of all the leading rubber companies here — President Litchfield of Goodyear, President Tew of Goodrich, President Firestone of Firestone, President Seiberling of Seiberling, President O'Neil of General, as well as other Akron citizens, prompted me to give them—out of my ignorance—the only thing they say a Scotsman ever willingly gives, namely, advice—it costs nothing. What will make America prosperous?

Prosperous industries.

What will keep our industries from becoming prosperous?

Destructive competition.

DID YOU KNOW that when you buy an automobile the chances are that each tire on it represents a loss, not a profit, to the manufacturer who supplied it?

Did you know that the rubber industry figures that it makes not one dollar in dividends from the many, many millions of tires it furnishes to motor makers every year?

What is the reason?

Destructive competition.

NOW, THAT IS not a healthy condition. It is not a desirable condition and should be remedied.

My advice to our rubber leaders was and is to get together in a broad-gauge give-and-take spirit for the vital purpose of raising the industry to a reasonable level of prosperity.

TIGER HEART -:- By Robert Terry Shannon

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

On the eve of her marriage to handsome Jim Tracey, vivacious Connie Calvert, rich society girl, receives a letter which causes her to leave her palatial home in Connecticut on a mysterious automobile drive to New York. Jim sees her. Connie stops at a cheap restaurant on the West Side and waits for someone. The letter threatens to expose Connie. A man approaches Connie and introduces himself as Duke Garson.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER IV.

There was a stretching silence between Connie and Duke Garson, while their eyes met over the table. Secretly, Connie was telling herself that she must not be upset, no matter what the man said. There was nothing in her past life that was shameful, she had nothing on earth to fear. She was not going to be bullied or brow-beaten or victimized.

"Just what, Mr. Garson, is this unpleasant truth you speak of?"

Her voice was steady, confident. Even she had a little thrill at the midnight adventure. Once when she had swum beyond safety in the Sound and was fighting her way back to shore she had experienced the same odd exhilaration. Duke Garson's eyes were masks. Behind his lack of expression—she imagined—evil must be lurking, yet she felt no uneasiness whatever.

"Your father died some years ago," Duke Garson stated. "I wonder how much you know about his past life."

Hears About Father

So that was the game! They were striking at her—at her mother—then a dead man.

"I know all about my father's past life," she replied, carefully checking any anger so that her mind would stay clear.

"In that case," Duke Garson went on, in a low, careful voice, "you probably know that Mr. Calvert was what might be called wild. He drank heavily, he gambled, and he had an eye for the ladies. Please don't think I'm maligning him—I'm merely stating facts that were pretty well known. He was, also, generous and impulsive. He inherited his money and all his life he did about as he pleased. Correct?"

Connie did not answer. Too well she knew Duke Garson was speaking the truth. These things she could not help knowing. Everyone knew them. Only her mother, blindly worshipful, never saw a fault in the reckless man now dead and gone.

"I see you don't care to contradict me about your father's life?"

"Not yet," Connie said.

"I'll tell you more," Garson continued. "I'll tell you something that I'm sure neither you nor your mother ever suspected. Did you know that your father—before he married your mother—was married to a Tenth avenue girl? Remember, this was more than 20 years ago, and several years before you were born."

Connie felt her heart grip.

"I never heard of any such thing, and I don't believe it's true," she said, with hushed bitterness.

"Unfortunately for everybody concerned, Miss Calvert, I'm telling you the truth. The proof is absolute. The marriage records are available. It was a secret marriage, but legal, nevertheless. Please, for the present, take what I'm telling you on faith—the proof will be forthcoming later whenever you desire it."

Says He Has Proof

But Connie, having prepared herself to bear any kind of story, was steeled against shock. Such a tale, of course, might possibly be true, but, for the present, no panic of feeling was going to break through her built-up armor of poise.

"Go on, please."

"The girl he married was named Kitty Cunningham. I don't know why your father married her—possibly because he had a trace of conscience. At any rate, Kate Cunningham died shortly after the marriage, but not before a baby—a girl—was born. About that time, I imagine, your father was already paying court to your mother. So far as we know, he never saw his daughter. Until she was 10 or 11 years old he sent small monthly sums of money to the Irish family that brought the girl up. When he died the money stopped."

Duke Garson was stating the bare, jagged facts and leaving Connie's imagination to clothe them with details. She was watching his steady eyes in absorbed fascination. Despite her urgent desire to cry him down—to denounce him as a liar—she was, slowly and terribly, being convinced that he was dealing in truth.

"You say you can prove all this?" she asked, tensely.

"We can prove everything, Miss Calvert. Perhaps you're wondering why these people who brought up this girl never made any claims on your father's estate. I will explain that by saying they were ignorant people. The man was a drunkard and his wife could neither read nor write. Perhaps you have no idea how stupid and shiftless some people are. When the child was 14 her foster mother died and the drunkard husband disappeared. Your half-sister, Kate—she was named for her mother, but they called her Kitty—hit the world alone and on her own. It was pretty tough, don't you think, for a kid of 14 to start out on Tenth avenue and try to keep alive and decent at the same time?"

Realizes Possibility

Connie knew that her own face had lost color. It was terrible! The whole story sounded incredible; yet, revolving the facts swiftly in her mind, she was shocked to realize that it was possible. Her father had been a man of wonderful charm—but he had been streaked with a wild irresponsibility.

"Why are you telling me all this?" she demanded. "What do you want me to do?"

Garson looked at her unwaveringly.

"I, myself have no personal interest in the matter whatever. I'm simply acting in behalf of your sister, Kitty Calvert. All of your life you've been living on the fat of the land; you've had every luxury that money and a home could give a girl. During all these same years your father's other daughter has been battling her way along down here on the avenue. I'll be perfectly frank. She has been mixed up with underworld life. By that, I don't mean she's been on the loose; she hasn't, but her friends—well, the kind of men police are looking for—if you know what I mean. I wouldn't say she's been mixed up in any crooked stuff herself—nor would I deny it. I don't suppose you're even able to picture in your mind what sort of life she has led."

A sudden impulse, stronger than any brain reasoning, leaped from Connie's heart.

"Nothing easier; she's here now. It will be quite a family reunion, won't it?"

DAILY TRUE STORY — 'Unemployed'

Three years had passed since Mrs. Warren P. Langford had entered her husband's office.

While there had been no divorce or a move toward any legal separation, yet it was tactily understood that they were permanently estranged.

Mrs. Langford kept much to her Tuxedo Park estate, or else occupied the penthouse atop of her own apartment building on the avenue, for Mrs. Langford had her own private fortune.

Mr. Langford lived in the town house or else out at the exclusive Greenlea Country Club.

One afternoon he walked in, after his well known signal, a double tap at the office door, and said:

"Mrs. Langford to see you."

It might have been Mrs. Smith or Mr. Jones, for all the expression to Monty's face. It was Mr. Langford who was surprised.

"Mrs. Langford?" he asked.

"Yes, sir."

"My wife?"

"Yes, sir."

"What the devil does she—er—yes, have her come in."

Marion Langford entered. Her husband arose and moved the carved walnut, high-backed and purposely uncomfortable office-visitor chair forward.

"Now, Warren, I may stay 10 minutes or so. Should you put me in that torture chair?" she asked, breezily.

He pulled forward another and easier chair. As she sat down he began to pace.

"Do sit down, Warren—my nerves aren't what they used to be."

"You ruined them, of course."

"Indeed? You forget we haven't been together alone for ten minutes in three years. Can't you be fair in anything, Marion?"

"Nevertheless, you ruined my nerves—your treatment of Waddy!"

Agreement Reached

"I like that!" Mr. Langford exclaimed, explosively.

"I don't. I want Waddy to have some regard for his position and his social duties. You keep him here in these old offices, his nose to the hideous grindstone of work—what chance does he have? Since you are not willing to maintain the role of host at my functions, you could at least permit Waddy to do so."

"Listen, Marion—you almost take my breath away. I have an even greater complaint to make—the way you keep Waddy jumping about in your social circle, I can't do a thing with him in the office. He has to quit at noon to dress for some afternoon foolishness when you are in town, or he has to leave early in time to throw his evening clothes in a bag and drive up to Tuxedo. Your affairs break up around dawn. Waddy has just about time to drive home, take a shower and come to the office, and what is the result—"

"But I need Waddy, Warren, can't you see? With you gone, it will look terrible if I haven't Waddy to play host for me."

"I'll split with you, Marion. Let him prance around like an ape in a dress suit for you for three days and then I'll have him in the office with me for three days."

"Very well."

"I'll be needing you, Thursday," Langford said on Saturday noon, when Waddy was leaving the office.

"O. K." he answered, adding, "I'll have enough of it by then."

But this was because Waddy didn't know Inez Carrol.

He met her up at the country estate and for the first time he took more than a polite or friendly interest in a girl.

Discharged by Father

Waddy was delighted with Inez. They rode Sunday morning and enjoyed golf Monday afternoon. They danced in the evening and were together most of the time.

Thursday, Mr. Langford received a telephone call from Waddy.

"But I need you—you promised—"

"Shucks, father, you know you don't actually need me, and there's a girl here I'm crazy about; she is the stunningest—"

Waddy appeared at the office Monday.

"Mr. Langford won't be in this morning, sir," he said to Waddy. "He—er—he asked me to tell you to see the Squires."

Squires was the cashier.

Waddy went out to the cashier's office and saw Mrs. Squires, who also appeared nervous as he handed an envelope.

The envelope contained a check for two weeks and the regulation form statement to the effect that the two weeks' salary was being given in lieu of notice and that his services were ended at that moment.

He didn't tell his mother about it, but telephoned up to Inez and asked her if she couldn't come down to town.

Inez came. He took her to a place for afternoon tea and dancing and he told her everything. He felt that she ought to know the entire situation.

"Of course, we all know there is estrangement between your father and mother, Waddy, but the point is, do you intend to do nothing and live on your mother's money?"

"What do you suggest?"

Inez thought it over. They sat by a window and she stared out on the street. There was a man at the curb selling apples.

"You might sell apples," she suggested, her eyes sparkling. Then she leaned over to him and whispered. Waddy seemed amazed, and, at first he shook his head, but finally he laughed and said, "I'll do it."

At 9 the next morning, in a sartorially perfect business suit, Waddy stood at the curb in front of his father's office building with a box of apples and the customary sign in his hat.

His father saw him, started to speak, and stalked inside.

At 1 p. m. Waddy was there again, but this time in impeccable afternoon rig, frock coat, gardenia, striped trousers, top hat and all. He was still selling apples and wearing the placard announcing that he was unemployed.

That evening, in front of his father's town house, Waddy stood at the curb in full evening dress regalia, still selling apples.

On Saturday afternoon, when his father drove out to the country club, he found Waddy at the gate, wearing the latest in sport clothes but still selling apples.

The next Monday morning as his father got out of his car to go into the office a supposed newspaperman accosted Waddy.

"Tomorrow I will give you an interview, telling all of my reasons for doing this and all of the events that led up to my unemployment," Waddy promised lightly. The newspaper man departed.

Langford Agrees

"Buy an apple, sair?" Waddy asked, extending an apple to his father.

"Come up in my office, and remove that damned placard," Langford ordered.

"You can't give that interview tomorrow. It isn't fair to me or to your mother," Langford said.

"Listen to what's talking about fairness," Waddy answered. Then he leaned over and grinned at his father.

"Unless you give me a little conference here with two friends this afternoon, the interview goes," he said.

At the conference was Inez, who was introduced to Mr. Langford. Then Mrs. Langford arrived.

"If you two would make up and live together," Waddy said, "father could play host part of the time, and give me a chance to do my society stuff and my office work without trouble—then I could marry Inez and settle down."

"How about it, Marion?" Langford asked.

"It would be lovely, Warren."

Langford turned to his son.

"Tear up that 'Unemployed' card, Waddy," he ordered.

I'VE ALWAYS LOOKED FORWARD TO A MARRIAGE LIKE THIS FOR YOU TOO, PEGGY. ALWAYS AND IT WAS UP-HILL WORK TO EVEN THINK ABOUT IT TOO BECAUSE, AS WE BOTH KNOW, THE ONLY TIME IT LOOKED AS THOUGH ANY OF THE BUNGLES WOULD SET THE WORLD ON FIRE WAS WHEN SOME OF THEM DID IT IN A SMALL WAY FOR THE INSURANCE.
YES, THE BUNGLES HAVE THEIR FAULTS, OF COURSE.
AND I DON'T MIND ADMITTING THAT MY OWN FAMILY IS.....IN SOME WAYS— A LOT LIKE THE BUNGLES. WHAT I MEAN IS THAT THEY'RE DIFFERENT FROM THOSE EL DORADOS. THERE'S A REAL FAMILY. I'LL BET THEY COULD WALK INTO ANY STORE IN TOWN AND SAY CHARGE IT AND THE CLERKS WOULD JUST BOW.
THEY HAVE THEIR TROUBLES, FROM WHAT MONTGOMERY TELLS ME
MONEY ISN'T EVERYTHING. PEOPLE ENVY THE EL DORADOS AND—WELL HONEY A LITTLE ENVY DOESN'T DO ANY HARM, GOODNESS KNOWS PEOPLE DON'T HESITATE TO REMIND YOU OF IT IF THEY THINK YOU'RE BELOW THEM. I KNOW. I DON'T BELIEVE IN ANYONE BEING STUCK-UP, ESPECIALLY ABOUT HAVING MONEY, BUT ON THE OTHER HAND IT'S NOT A BAD IDEA TO HAVE OTHERS— WOMEN IN PARTICULAR— KNOW THEIR PLACE.

BULLETIN
(London Dispatch.)

"After a visit to the United States, I must report that American women have none of that tired, bored-to-death attitude that you come across in European cities."—J. W. Drawbell, editor London Chronicle.

SAGGING BLUES

To Be Muttered, Mumbled or Lisped With Cello Lagging Along Behind

Sometimes I sit and wonder why
I'm such a soggy, gloomy guy,
For things that make so many happy
Seem to me so weirdly sappy.
Perhaps I am all out of step,
Devoid of verve, devoid of pep,
Perhaps I am inclined to lag,
And that is why my spirits sag—
But this I know, and know it well,
My spirits shrink, my feelings jell
Whenever I am forced to sit
At bridge—I throw an inward fit.
I'll never play at golf again,
Nice people give me quite a pain—
I don't like this, I don't like that,
I can't sit down and calmly chat—
The plays I see disturb me so
I get me up and homeward go—
I try, at least, to read and swear
The most of it is Camembert—
I don't like play, I don't like work,
The things I ought to do I shirk—
But this, I know, is elemental—
Depression is an ailment mental—
But just which corner? Kindly state.

Congress Should Decree Immediately Deportation of All Undesirable Aliens

CONGRESS will be urged at this session to suppress racketeering.

The way to suppress racketeering is to suppress racketeers.

Racketeers and all other criminals come largely from two classes—undesirable ALIENS and uneducated AMERICANS.

Hence the way to rid the country of them is:

1.—To send undesirable aliens home; and

UNDESIRABLE aliens have largely been driven out of their own countries and have flocked to America, as vermin are driven out by a housecleaning from one house to another.

It is time for America to have a housecleaning and to drive these vermin out of our house and back to their own.

Mr. Hoover thinks that existing laws, state and federal, are sufficient to accomplish this, but they are not.

IN the last annual report of Secretary of Labor Davis, there is this significant passage:

"I want to urge that the laws be amended so as to make possible the expulsion from the United States of certain classes of obviously undesirable aliens who are now immune from deportation.

"We have now a law for the deportation of criminals if their crimes involve moral turpitude, but it does not reach the great number of aliens who persistently violate other laws, both federal and state, because it has been held that their offenses are not within the scope of the present law.

"They are a great obstacle in the way of law enforcement and through repeated convictions and imprisonments are a heavy burden on the public."

FURTHERMORE, the immigration act of March 4, 1929, section 3, provides that "any alien sentenced to imprisonment SHALL NOT BE DEPORTED UNDER ANY PROVISION OF LAW UNTIL AFTER THE TERMINATION OF THE PUNISHMENT."

WHY NOT?

Why should aliens crowd our jails and live on our taxpayers?

In fact, why should any undesirable alien, unless it be one imprisoned for a capital crime, stay here on any pretext whatever?

Since new legislation is needed to deport such aliens, CONGRESS SHOULD PASS IT PROMPTLY AT THIS SESSION.

MR. HOOVER may be only interested in getting this country into foreign entanglements, but Congress can still take an interest in our own country and in the proper protection of our own people.

Illiteracy is itself a crime, and the United States is criminally guilty for every one of the 5,000,000 illiterates within its borders.

CONSIDER these facts:

When the great war began, there were more than 5,500,000 persons in this country 10 years of age and over UNABLE TO READ OR WRITE.

This was 7.7 per cent of our total population.

This was less by only a few thousand than the total population 10 years of age and over in all the New England states, or in the states of Montana, Wyoming, Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona, Utah, Nevada, Idaho, Washington, Oregon and California.

IN double line of march at intervals of three feet, the United States Commissioner of Education estimated that these more than 5,000,000 illiterates would extend over a distance of 1,567 miles—more than twice the distance from Washington to Jacksonville, Fla., or half way across the continent, from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

The 1920 figures revealed that this country still had 4,931,905 persons over 10 years of age who could neither read nor write. This was 6.1 per cent of our population. The 1930 figures have not yet been published, but there is no reason to think that the percentage of illiteracy has been greatly reduced.

RECENT crime surveys reveal that our criminal class, especially the new type of gangster, is largely composed of the young, many of them still in their teens at the time of their first conviction.

It is the illiterate, or poorly educated, underprivileged child of yesterday that is so frequently found in the prison gang of today.

An ounce of prevention is worth a ton of punishment. Mere brutal punishment always has failed to prevent crime. It always will. Our prisons are full and running over, more prisons are being built and still more are being demanded.

Education and the fair start in life that it gives to the youth of the land will do more to prevent crime than all the punishment that ever could be devised by the bigots who are to blame for the Jones law passed by Congress and the Baumes laws passed by the state of New York.

ON Congress, therefore—on the Congress now in session—devolve these imperative duties:

1. To provide for the immediate deportation of all undesirable aliens, and to substitute selective immigration for the indiscriminate immigration which lets in so many undesirables.

2. To abolish illiteracy among Americans and promote education among all the states by establishing a federal department of education, and in that way guarantee a fair chance in life for every American child.

Mr. Hoover will not recommend these desirable and necessary measures but Congress can pass them without recommendation, and if need be can pass them even over the President's veto.

Safe Industries

Several Plants in Western Pennsylvania Are Following the Advice Given at the Recent Conference

The Pennsylvania Manufacturers' Association directs attention to several industrial plants in Western Pennsylvania which have been remarkably free from accidents. They stand as reminders that the advice given at the recent National Safety Conference in Pittsburgh is being followed.

The Peoples Natural Gas Company reports that four departments have worked nearly a million and a half man hours without a lost time accident. The nail department at the Farrell works of the American Steel and Wire Company reports the completion of six years without a lost time accident. The West Newton plant of the United States Radiator Company reports operation for 207 days without a lost time accident.

As a safety example for structural steel workers it is stated that the 42-story steel frame of the Cathedral of Learning was erected without a single serious mishap.

If individuals should display as much interest in safety as the industrial corporations we would have fewer accidents in homes and on the streets as well as in mills and on the railroads.

On Guard!

It Behooves All the Citizens to Scrutinize and Express Themselves on Bills Affecting Their Welfare

Businessmen from various parts of Western Pennsylvania are meeting here today under the auspices of the Pennsylvania State Chamber of Commerce to discuss bills affecting their business which they expect will be introduced in the Legislature at the forthcoming session.

They set a good example.

It behooves all the citizens to watch carefully proposed legislation and to express their opinions freely.

It sometimes happens that bills seemingly beneficial, or at any rate harmless in their import, contain "jokers" that give them power for evil. Not only businessmen but every other class of people who feel some concern over the manner in which affairs are to be regulated by the Commonwealth will be on guard against such measures and let their representatives know what they think of them.

Pittsburgh Composers

The City Has a Notable Record as the Home of Writers of Grand Operas

Another Pittsburgher has written a grand opera.

"Sakuntala", by Anthony Modarelli, who was born and raised here, had a successful premiere in Germany Sunday night.

It brings to mind "Poia", by Arthur Finley Nevin (born in Edgeworth), which also was first produced in Germany.

While we are discussing Pittsburgh composers of grand opera we must not forget Joseph Carl Breil, also a native of the city, who wrote "The Legend", produced at the Metropolitan in New York. He composed the music, by the way, which opens and closes Amos and Andy's radio performance.

If we should take into consideration composers of grand opera who, while not born in Pittsburgh, lived here for some years and were closely identified with the life of the city, we could add to the list Charles Wakefield Cadman, author of "Shanewis", the first American opera to last more than one season at the Metropolitan Opera House, and Victor Herbert, composer of "Natoma".

The record reminds us that Pittsburgh fosters the fine arts as well as the things for which it is best known.

This Snake Eats Calves

Men looking at this snake, alive, would shudder and women would faint, probably.

According to religious teaching they shudder because, in a vague way, they remember what the snake did to poor Eve.

According to science a woman shudders when she sees the snake because when she lived up in the trees, 50,000,000 years ago, the snake was one creature that could climb the tree, glide out along the branch and take her baby from her arms as she sat asleep in her nest.

You don't have to believe that about the lady of 50,000,000 years ago, so let us return to the snake.

It lives in Brazil and is hated and feared by cattle farmers because, when calves go down to the river to drink, this monster anaconda, called in Brazil a sucury, seizes the calf, squeezes the breath and life out of it and then devours it.

These monsters, that grow to be 36 feet long, have gigantic bodies, with terrible power in their nerves, muscles and marvelous spinal column running from the small, dull brain the full length of the long body.

Calves and water pigs are their favorite diet. And they would gladly eat men, and could eat them and WOULD if they had more intelligence.

Luckily for human beings the snakes are among the least intelligent of animals. This monster when he sees a man approaching simply goes into the water and stays there with his head above the surface, thinking he has solved his problem.

The man throws a lasso over the head and neck, tightens it and hauls the giant, threshing and lashing, out of the water and disposes of him.

In some ways this anaconda reminds you of the American gentleman who has made a big fortune and thinks nothing thereafter can bother him. Sometimes he is mistaken.

The anaconda will swallow a water pig, and in the cold weather lie at the edge of the river in the sunshine, warming himself while he digests.

Man comes, puts a bullet into the small brain, and that digestion is never completed.

The venomous snake depends on his poison.

A rattlesnake, if you step on it, will bite you, and you may die.

But as you approach, it warns you with its rattle and arrogantly refuses to move.

When you break its back with a stone, or a club, it rattles indignantly as much as to say, "Didn't the poor fool hear me, doesn't he know I am a rattlesnake?"

In India and in other countries the most poisonous snakes, including the cobra, or hooded snake, have been worshiped by the natives. Those natives happen to have not much more brain than the snakes themselves.

Weak, with small nails, small teeth, much feebler than all the animals of his own size, man had only one hope, and that was in THINKING.

Some day he may think well enough to get rid of war, wholesale and retail murder, and the mean selfishness that pushes men to accumulate for themselves what they don't need, ignoring their brothers that need their help.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—That sweep to Central Park West from 92d street to Columbus Circle has suddenly acquired a striking new architectural opulence. It bristles with dizzy towers—a street that came back. Always geographically superb, it for a time somehow became shabby.

Fine old apartment houses with genuine aristocratic pretensions went to seed and became the sort featuring those sullen West Indian hallboys and lacquered ladies whose companionship consisted solely of chows, colored maids and gentlemen who carried their own keys.

Overlooking the park, the thoroughfare was rightfully, next to Riverside Drive, one of the most fashionable on the West Side. But New York streets unless watched go into devastating decay. Like a spotted apple in the barrel, one shady apartment house will spoil an entire street.

Central Park West began to take on a patina of pomp 20 years ago when the millionaire backers of the ill-fated New—later the Century and now being razed—theater chose the street for its site. This was followed by other outbursts of building splendor.

The Ethical Culture School lodged there. As did the First and Second churches of Christ Science and private schools. Real estate boomed and the street was widened. Then all at once there was a pronounced sag. Central Park West seemed on the skids.

Utter stagnation seized it for seven years. About a year ago it began to revive. Magnificent apartments topped by pent houses shot up magically. The character of the residents completely changed. People of importance moved in and the street is swanky again.

Two of the finest residential apartments in town have recently been finished in the area of the 90's. The Dakota, considered by many the best built apartment house in the metropolis, still stands at a West 72d street corner—about the last of the old guard.

And on Park avenue this morning a platinum blonde bundled up in chinchilla stepped from a block long limousine, titivated her face before a vanity mirror, lit a cigaret and waited. Presently a messenger came up and handed her a note which she tore up and threw away before reading. I'm still a-twitter.

They had run out of every dish Bide Dudley ordered so he ate what they brought him. But at the cashier's desk he exclaimed: "It's funny but I've run out of money."

In a second-hand book shop the other day I came upon a yellowing copy of the Family Fireside, that weekly literary wallop of the Gay Nineties. Its fiction dealt almost solely with dukes, Lady de Veres and curse-you villians with insinuating sneers. The ads., too, provided a sensation in hum-drum lives, especially that one headed: "Be Important—Get Big Mail." The drawing accompanying it showed a postman, bowed double with the weight of a ponderous sack, ringing the door bell.

I have never quite forgiven the perpetrators of the flim-flam captioned: "Learn Ventriloquism at Home and Fool Your Friends." (Lock Box 86, Dept. J., Altoona, Pa.) I sent off 50 cents in stamps for the entire course. For five days after it came I went about uttering queer tight lipped noises, trying to make a voice in a closet say: "Let me out!" As an inglorious climax I was taken to the family doctor for a tonsil yanking. But I kept my secret.
